NEW QUESTION # 61

Which of the following is a BEST practice when traveling internationally with laptops containing Personally Identifiable Information (PII)?

- A. Connect the laptop only to well-known networks like the hotel or public Internet cafes.
- B. Use a thumb drive to transfer information from a foreign computer.
- C. Request international points of contact help scan the laptop on arrival to ensure it is protected.
- D. Do not take unnecessary information, including sensitive information.

Answer: D

Explanation:

The best practice when traveling internationally with laptops containing Personally Identifiable Information (PII) is to do not take unnecessary information, including sensitive information. PII is any information that can be used to identify, contact, or locate a specific individual, such as name, address, phone number, email, social security number, or biometric data. PII is subject to various privacy and security laws and regulations, and must be protected from unauthorized access, use, disclosure, or theft. When traveling internationally with laptops containing PII, the best practice is to minimize the amount and type of PII that is stored or processed on the laptop, and to take only the information that is absolutely necessary for the business purpose. This can reduce the risk of losing, exposing, or compromising the PII, and the potential legal or reputational consequences. Using a thumb drive to transfer information from a foreign computer, connecting the laptop only to well-known networks like the hotel or public Internet cafes, and requesting international points of contact help scan the laptop on arrival to ensure it is protected are not the best practices when traveling internationally with laptops containing PII, as they may still expose the PII to various threats, such as malware, interception, or tampering, and may not comply with the privacy and security requirements of different countries or regions. - B. management's approach towards enterprise's security posture
- C. employee's attitudes and behaviors towards enterprise's security posture
- D. corporate attitudes about safeguarding data

Answer: C

Security-awareness training is performed to modify employees' behavior and attitude toward security. This can best be achieved through a formalized process of security-awareness training.

It is used to increase the overall awareness of security throughout the company. It is targeted to every single employee and not only to one group of users.

Unfortunately you cannot apply a patch to a human being, the only thing you can do is to educate employees and make them more aware of security issues and threats. Never underestimate human stupidity.
