Axis Network Video Exam Sample Questions (Q314-Q319):

NEW QUESTION # 314

Video motion detection (VMD) in a PTZ camera

- A. Is not possible since the camera will activate the VMD every time it is moving.
- B. Is no different compared to a fix camera, since the Axis chip can detect in three dimensions.
- C. Can be used but only when the camera is used as a stationary camera.
- D. Can be used since the camera is aborting the VMD during movement.

Answer: C

Explanation:

Video motion detection (VMD) in PTZ (Pan-Tilt-Zoom) cameras is feasible but primarily when the camera is used as a stationary camera. PTZ cameras can activate motion detection when they are not moving, as movement of the camera itself would otherwise trigger the VMD. When the camera is stationary, it can effectively detect motion within its field of view similar to a fixed camera. Therefore, option B is correct. For more detailed information, refer to Axis Communications' guidelines on VMD functionality in PTZ cameras.

- C. Computer 5 can only access cameras 2, 3, and 4.
- D. Camera 1 can only be accessed by computers 1, 2, 3, or 4.

Answer: B

"Both Computer 1 (192.168.1.10) and Computer 5 (192.168.1.10) have the same IP address assigned within the same network (192.168.1.0/24). This creates an IP address conflict, causing communication errors on the network."

When dealing with a poorly lit scene, which of the following options would most improve image quality?

- A. Changing camera placement
- B. Adjusting exposure settings
- C. Adding light
- D. Adjusting brightness

Answer: C

Explanation:

When dealing with a poorly lit scene, adding light is the most effective option to improve image quality.

Proper illumination ensures that the camera's sensor can capture clear and detailed images, reducing noise and enhancing visibility.

While adjusting exposure settings, brightness, or changing camera placement can help, they are secondary to the fundamental requirement of adequate lighting.
