Questions (Q57-Q62):

NEW QUESTION # 57

You are using Snowflake notebooks to build a data pipeline. You want to parameterize a SQL query using Python variables to filter data based on a date range provided as input to the notebook. You have and 'end_date' Python variables. Which of the following is the most secure and efficient way to incorporate these variables into a SQL query executed within a Snowflake notebook using Snowpark?

- A. ☐
- B. ☐
- C. ☐
- D. ☐
- E. ☐

Answer: E

Explanation:

Option B is the most secure and efficient way. Snowpark's 'session.sql()' method supports parameterized queries using ':1 , `:2' , etc., to represent placeholders for the Python variables.

This prevents SQL injection vulnerabilities and allows Snowflake to optimize the query execution plan by reusing it with different parameter values. Option A is vulnerable to SQL injection. Option C is a less secure string formatting method. Option D is prone to errors and SQL injection. Option E is not a valid way to parameterize the query in Snowflake with Snowpark API.

NEW QUESTION # 58

A data warehouse contains a table named 'ORDERS in schema `SALES'. The current owner of the `ORDERS' table is the `ANALYST role. The compliance team requires that the ownership be transferred to the 'SECURITY ADMIN' role, but without interrupting any existing queries or processes that use the table. What is the recommended approach to transfer ownership with minimal disruption?

- A. Create a clone of the 'ORDERS table, transfer ownership of the clone, then drop the original 'ORDERS' table and rename the clone to `ORDERS.
- B. Create a view on top of the 'ORDERS' table, transfer ownership of the view to 'SECURITY ADMIN' , and then drop the original 'ORDERS' table.
- C. Execute 'ALTER TABLE SALES.ORDERS TRANSFER OWNERSHIP TO ROLE SECURITY_ADMIN;' during a scheduled maintenance window when no queries are running.
- D. Immediately execute 'ALTER TABLE SALES.ORDERS TRANSFER OWNERSHIP TO ROLE SECURITY_ADMIN;'
- E. Create a new table with the same structure as 'ORDERS' , load data into it, grant all privileges to 'SECURITY_ADMIN' and users from 'ANALYST role, and then drop the original 'ORDERS table. Finally, rename the new table to 'ORDERS.

Answer: D

Explanation:

Transferring ownership using 'ALTER TABLE ... TRANSFER OWNERSHIP' is a metadata operation and does not lock or significantly impact existing queries on the table. It's the most straightforward and least disruptive approach. Cloning, creating views, or recreating tables involve significant data operations and downtime, which are undesirable.

NEW QUESTION # 59

Which of the following statements are true about Zero-Copy Cloning in Snowflake? (Select TWO)

- A. It requires significant additional storage.
- B. It creates a writable copy of an object.
- C. It is immediate and metadata-only operation.
- D. It duplicates the underlying data storage.

Answer: B,C

Explanation:

Zero-Copy Cloning is a metadata-only operation, creating instantaneous clones without copying underlying data. Clones are fully writable and operate independently. Snowflake only allocates storage when data diverges due to modifications. It does not require significant storage nor duplicate physical data.

NEW QUESTION # 60
Which are the type of Views we have in Snowflake? (Choose any 3 options)

- A. Secure
- B. UnMaterialized
- C. Materialized
- D. Non-Materialized

Answer: A,C,D

Explanation:
Snowflake supports Non-Materialized Views(standard views),Materialized Views, andSecure Views. Non- materialized views compute results dynamically at query time. Materialized views store precomputed results, improving performance for repeated analytical queries. Secure views protect underlying query logic and metadata from being exposed, ensuring privacy when sharing datasets. The option "UnMaterialized" is not a Snowflake concept and does not exist as a view type.

NEW QUESTION # 61
You are designing a data warehouse in Snowflake. You need to ensure that users in the 'REPORTING TEAM' can only view data in the 'SALES TABLE' table after it has been masked to hide sensitive information. You have implemented a masking policy called 'EMAIL MASK' that replaces email addresses with asterisks. How do you apply the masking policy and grant the correct privileges to the 'REPORTING TEAM' role?

- A. ALTER TABLE SALES_TABLE MODIFY COLUMN email SET MASKING POLICY EMAIL_MASK; GRANT APPLY MASKING POLICY ON ACCOUNT TO ROLE REPORTING_TEAM; GRANT SELECT ON TABLE SALES_TABLE TO ROLE REPORTING_TEAM;
- B. ALTER TABLE SALES_TABLE MODIFY COLUMN email
  SET MASKING POLICY EMAIL_MASK;
  GRANT SELECT ON TABLE SALES_TABLE TO ROLE REPORTING_TEAM;
- C. GRANT UNMASK ON TABLE SALES_TABLE TO ROLE REPORTING_TEAM;
  ALTER TABLE SALES_TABLE MODIFY COLUMN email SET MASKING POLICY EMAIL_MASK;
- D. CREATE MASKING POLICY EMAIL_MASK
  AS (val string) RETURNS string ->
  CASE WHEN CURRENT_ROLE() IN ('REPORTING_TEAM') THEN '**'
  ELSE val END;
  ALTER TABLE SALES_TABLE MODIFY COLUMN email SET MASKING POLICY EMAIL_MASK; GRANT
  SELECT ON TABLE SALES_TABLE TO ROLE REPORTING_TEAM;
- E. GRANT APPLY MASKING POLICY ON ACCOUNT TO ROLE REPORTING_TEAM;
  ALTER TABLE SALES_TABLE MODIFY COLUMN email SET MASKING POLICY EMAIL_MASK;

Answer: B

Explanation:
The correct approach involves applying the masking policy to the `email' column using SALTER TABLE ... MODIFY COLUMN SET MASKING POLICY. The 'GRANT SELECT statement allows the 'REPORTING_TEAW' to query the 'SALES_TABLE. There is no need to grant 'APPLY MASKING POLICY to the `REPORTING TEAM' role, as that privilege is needed for creating or altering masking policies. The `CREATE MASKING POLICY' in option C is redundant since the question states the policy already exists. GRANT UNMASK' would defeat the purpose of the masking policy.
