NEW QUESTION # 317

Which of the following is the BEST solution to implement to mitigate the risk of data breach in the event of a lost or stolen mobile device?

- A. Mobile application management

- B. Network Access Control (NAC)
- C. Mobile Device Management (MDM)
- D. Bring Your Own Device (BYOD) policy

Answer: C

NEW QUESTION # 318

If fixed costs are $200,000 and 20,000 units are produced, a unit's fixed cost is $10. This is an example of:

- A. absorption costing.
- B. activity-based costing (ABC).
- C. variable costing.
- D. overhead costing.

Answer: A

Explanation:

Absorption costing is a method of allocating all manufacturing costs to the units produced. It includes both fixed and variable costs in the calculation of the unit cost. In this example, the fixed cost per unit is $10, which is obtained by dividing the total fixed cost of $200,000 by the number of units produced (20,000). This fixed cost per unit is then added to the variable cost per unit to get the total unit cost under absorption costing.

Variable costing, on the other hand, only assigns variable costs to the units produced and treats fixed costs as period costs. Activity-based costing (ABC) is a method of allocating overhead costs to products or services based on the activities they consume.

Overhead costing is a general term that refers to any method of assigning overhead costs to products or services. - A. Signed Non-Disclosure Agreement (NDA)
- B. ISC2 Code of Ethics
- C. Suspicious that a crime is being committed
- D. Signed Acceptable Use Policy (AUP)

NEW QUESTION # 320

Which of the following methods most likely introduces a temporary variance between the inventory balance and the inventory record?

- A. Inventory write-off
- B. Cycle count
- C. Kanban
- D. Backflushing

Answer: D

Explanation:

Backflushing is a method of inventory accounting that deducts the materials used in production from the inventory record after the completion of a product or batch. This introduces a temporary variance between the actual inventory balance and the inventory record, which should be reconciled periodically. Inventory write-off, cycle count, and kanban do not cause such a variance.

NEW QUESTION # 321

A logistics manager is faced with delivering an order via rail or truck. Shipping via rail costs $300 and takes 14 days. Shipping via truck costs $600 and takes 3 days. If the holding cost is $40 per day, what is the cost to deliver the order?

- A. $340 for rail, $600 for truck
- B. $860 for rail, $720 for truck
- C. $340 for rail, $720 for truck
- D. $860 for rail, $600 for truck

Answer: B

Explanation:

The cost to deliver the order consists of two components: the shipping cost and the holding cost. The shipping cost is the amount paid to the transportation mode for moving the order from the origin to the destination. The holding cost is the amount incurred for storing the order until it is delivered to the customer. The holding cost depends on the delivery time, which is the number of days it takes for the order to reach the customer. The longer the delivery time, the higher the holding cost. The shipping cost and the holding cost for each transportation mode are calculated as follows:

* Shipping via rail:

* Shipping cost = $300

* Delivery time = 14 days

* Holding cost = $$40 \times 14 = \560

* Total cost = $$300 + $560 = $860$

* Shipping via truck:

* Shipping cost = $600

* Delivery time = 3 days

* Holding cost = $$40 \times 3 = \120

* Total cost = $$600 + $120 = $720$

Therefore, the cost to deliver the order via rail is $860, and the cost to deliver the order via truck is

$720. References: Transportation Costing | APICS Dictionary Term of the Day, APICS CPIM 8 Planning and Inventory Management | ASCM
