NEW QUESTION # 42

You need to allow debugging in an extension to view the source code.

In which file should you specify the value of the allowDebugging property?

- A. app.json
- B. rad.json
- C. settings.json
- D. launch.json

Answer: A

Explanation:

To enable debugging in an extension and allow the source code to be viewed, the allowDebugging property should be specified in the app.json file (C). The app.json file serves as the manifest for an AL project in Microsoft Dynamics 365 Business Central, defining the project's properties, dependencies, and features. By setting the allowDebugging property to true in this file, developers enable the debugging of the extension's source code, facilitating troubleshooting and development. This is essential for analyzing the behavior of the extension and identifying issues during the development process.

NEW QUESTION # 43

A company uses Business Central.

The company plans to use a translation file in an extension. The extension has a caption that should not be translated.

You need to prevent the caption from being translated.

What should you do?

- A. Add the Locked = true parameter to the Caption.
- B. Set the GenerateLockedTranslations feature in the appjson file.
- C. Delete the Caption property.
- D. Copy the same caption for each language in the translation file.
- E. Use the CaptionML property and copy the same caption for each language used.

Answer: A

Explanation:

To prevent a caption from being translated in an extension for Microsoft Dynamics 365 Business Central, you should add the Locked = true parameter to the Caption (C). This parameter explicitly marks the caption as locked for translation, ensuring that it remains unchanged across different language versions of the extension.

This approach is useful for specific terms, brand names, or other elements within the application that should remain consistent regardless of the user's language settings. Unlike the other options, which involve manual manipulation of the translation file or properties, setting Locked = true directly in the AL code provides a clear, maintainable, and error-proof method to exclude specific captions from the translation process.
