CheckPoint Check Point Certified Security Expert - R82 Sample Questions (Q31-Q36):

NEW QUESTION # 31

What does the Firewall administrator need to do when Management Servers are in Collision Mode?

- A. Reboot both servers.
- B. Manually re-synchronize the servers.
- C. Do nothing; the servers will re-synchronize in the next synchronization interval.
- D. Run the cpstop; cpstart command in CLI on both servers.

Answer: B

Explanation:

The correct answer is D. Collision Mode means more than one Management Server is configured as Active. In this condition, the Active servers do not synchronize with each other, even if network connectivity exists. The administrator must manually resolve the conflict by changing one Active server back to Standby from SmartConsole's Management High Availability window. When one server becomes Standby, synchronization starts and the data on that Standby server is overwritten by the remaining Active server's data. That is why this must be handled deliberately; blindly rebooting both servers or restarting Check Point services does not resolve the logical HA conflict. Option B is dangerous because Check Point explicitly says two Active servers cannot sync with each other. Option C is also wrong because daemon restarts do not decide which database is authoritative. The operational correction is to manually return the environment to a single-Active model and allow synchronization from the authoritative Active Management Server. Reference topic: High Availability Troubleshooting / Collision or HA Conflict.

NEW QUESTION # 32

When it comes to manual synchronization, what statement is true?

- A. You can only initiate a Full Synchronization via Manual Sync.
- B. Manual Sync is only done at the very beginning to force a Cluster Join after having installed the Secondary Management Server.
- C. You can choose whether to perform a Full Sync or Delta Sync when it comes to do a Manual Sync.
- D. You can only initiate a Delta Synchronization via Manual Sync.

Answer: C

Explanation:

During manual synchronization, the administrator can select either a full synchronization to copy the entire database or a delta synchronization to transfer only the changes, depending on the situation and operational need.

NEW QUESTION # 33

What is the correct description for the Dynamic Balancing / Split feature?

- A. Dynamic Balancing / Split dynamically change the number of SND's and firewall instances based on the current load. It is only available on Quantum Appliances and Open Server (not on Quantum Spark)
- B. Dynamic Balancing / Split dynamically distribute the traffic from one network interface to multiple SND's. The interface must support Multi-Queue. It is only available on Quantum Appliances and Open Server (not on Quantum Spark)
- C. Dynamic Balancing / Split dynamically distribute the traffic from one network interface to multiple SND's. The interface must support Multi-Queue. It is only available on Quantum Appliances (not on Quantum Spark or Open Server)
- D. Dynamic Balancing / Split dynamically change the number of SND's and firewall instances based on the current load. It is only available on Quantum Appliances (not on Quantum Spark or Open Server)

Answer: D

NEW QUESTION # 34

Which upgrade method is initiated from SmartConsole?

- A. CPUSE
- B. Advanced Upgrade
- C. Central Deployment
- D. Central Deployment Tool

Answer: C

Explanation:

The correct answer is A. Central Deployment is the upgrade method initiated directly from SmartConsole.

Check Point's R82 Installation and Upgrade Guide describes Central Deployment in SmartConsole as the method used to install software packages to upgrade or perform a clean install on Security Gateways and Cluster Members. The R82 Security Management Administration Guide further describes Central Deployment from SmartConsole for deploying Hotfixes, Jumbo Hotfix Accumulators, and Upgrade Packages from either the Check Point Cloud or the Package Repository on the Management Server. Option B, CPUSE, is primarily a Gaia-local upgrade mechanism accessed through Gaia Portal or Gaia Clish on the target system. Option C, Advanced Upgrade, is a management-server migration-style process using export/import tools, not a SmartConsole-initiated upgrade workflow. Option D, Central Deployment Tool, is a separate tool that runs on the Management Server and is operated through CLI/plan files, not the SmartConsole Central Deployment UI. For CCSE R82, the clean mapping is: SmartConsole = Central Deployment; Gaia = CPUSE; CLI automation = CDT; management database migration = Advanced Upgrade. Reference topic: Upgrade Methods / Central Deployment in SmartConsole.

NEW QUESTION # 35

When deploying hotfixes with Smart Console, how many concurrent installations can take place?

- A. 0
- B. 1
- C. 2
- D. 3

Answer: B

Explanation:

SmartConsole allows up to 10 concurrent hotfix installations during a deployment, enabling administrators to update multiple gateways or servers simultaneously while controlling system load.
