Scrum Professional Scrum Master I Sample Questions (Q128-Q133):

NEW QUESTION # 128

Why does the Product Owner want the Development Team to adhere to its definition of "Done"?

- A. To be able to reprimand the team when they don't meet their velocity goal for the Sprint.
- B. To have complete transparency into what has been done at the end of each Sprint.
- C. To know what the team will deliver over the next three Sprints.
- D. To predict the team's productivity over time.

Answer: B

Explanation:

According to the Scrum Guide 1, the definition of "Done" is a formal description of the state of the Increment when it meets the quality measures required for the product. The definition guides the Development Team in creating a "Done" Increment. The definition of "Done" is created by the development organization (or Development Team if none is available from the development organization). The definition of "Done" may vary significantly per Scrum Team, depending on the context. One aspect of Scrum Teams inspecting how they work toward their Product Goal is that they improve their definition of "Done" over time. Therefore, one reason why the Product Owner wants the Development Team to adhere to its definition of "Done" is to have complete transparency into what has been done at the end of each Sprint.

NEW QUESTION # 129

(True or False: Cross-functional teams are optimized to work on one component or layer of a system only.)

- A. False
- B. True

Answer: A

Explanation:

The correct answer is B because cross-functional teams in Scrum are not optimized to work on only one component or one technical layer of a system. A cross-functional Scrum Team has all the skills necessary to create value each Sprint and deliver a usable Increment. This means the team should be capable of working across the different skills and disciplines needed to complete Product Backlog items according to the Definition of Done.

If a team is organized around only one component or specialty, it creates handoffs, dependencies, and silos.

Those conditions reduce agility and make it harder to deliver a complete Increment each Sprint. Scrum instead favors teams that can collaborate across analysis, design, development, testing, and other needed capabilities so they can produce finished product value rather than partial technical output.

Cross-functionality supports self-management and reduces delays caused by waiting on other specialists or teams. It helps the Scrum Team focus on outcomes instead of isolated activities. In Scrum, the goal is not local optimization of a single layer or function. The goal is delivering complete, useful, high-value Increments frequently and transparently.

NEW QUESTION # 130

Who is responsible for clearly expressing Product Backlog items?

- A. The Scrum Master, or the Scrum Master may have the Development Team do it.
- B. The Scrum Master.
- C. The business analyst who represents the Product Owner in the Development Team.

Answer: D

NEW QUESTION # 131

The Scrum Master observes the Product Owner struggling with ordering the Product Backlog. What is an appropriate action for the Scrum Master to take?

- A. Suggest that the Development Team does the ordering to be sure that it is a feasible ordering of work.
- B. Present the Product Owner with an ordered Product Backlog to use.
- C. Encourage the Product Owner to work with the Development Team to see which items technically are fastest to implement.
- D. Offer the Product Owner help in understanding that the goal of ordering the Product Backlog is to maximize value.
- E. Suggest the Product Owner extend the Sprint, so he can have more time to order the Product Backlog.

Answer: A

NEW QUESTION # 132
