Which of the following commands will remove that directory?

- C. `rmdir ~/\dir`

NEW QUESTION # 157

How many fields are in a syntactically correct line of `/etc/fstab`?

- A. 0
- B. 1
- C. 2
- D. 3
- E. 4

Answer: B

Explanation:

A syntactically correct line of `/etc/fstab` must have six fields, separated by whitespaces or tabs. The fields are as follows:

- * The device file, UUID or label or other means of locating the partition or data source.
- * The mount point, which is the directory where the device is/will be mounted.
- * The file system type, which specifies the type of the file system.
- * The mount options, which are a comma-separated list of options that control how the file system is mounted and accessed.
- * The dump flag, which is a number that indicates whether the file system should be backed up by the dump utility. This is an outdated method and should not be used.
- * The fsck order, which is a number that indicates the order in which the file system should be checked by the fsck utility at boot time. A value of 0 means no check, a value of 1 means the root file system, and a value of 2 or higher means other file systems.

For example, a line of `/etc/fstab` could look like this:

`UUID=80b496fa-ce2d-4dcf-9afc-bcaa731a67f1 /mnt/example ext4 defaults 0 2` This means that the file system with the UUID 80b496fa-ce2d-4dcf-9afc-bcaa731a67f1 is mounted on `/mnt`

`/example`, has the type `ext4`, uses the default mount options, is not backed up by dump, and is checked by fsck after the root file system.
