NEW QUESTION # 70

Which activity should be used inside a Use Excel File scope to be able to sort a table directly in an ".xlsx" file?

- A. Sort Data Table
- B. Get Table Range
- C. Read Range
- D. Sort Range

Answer: D

Explanation:
Within a "Use Excel File" scope, the "Sort Range" activity should be used to sort a table directly in an ".xlsx" file. This activity allows you to specify the range to sort, the field to sort by, and the sort order. The "Sort Data Table" activity (option B) operates on DataTable objects in memory and does not interact directly with Excel files.

NEW QUESTION # 71
Which of the following statements is true about Global Constants?

- A. Global Constants values can be modified during the automation execution.
- B. Global Constants can be created from the Data Manager panel and from the Variables panel.
- C. Global Constants have a Direction property (In/Out).
- D. Global Constants can be created only from the Data Manager panel.

Answer: B

Explanation:
Global Constants are a type of variables that can store data in a central location that can be accessed by all workflows and activities in a project. Unlike Global Variables, Global Constants have a fixed value that cannot be modified during the automation execution. Global Constants can be created from two places in UiPath Studio: the Data Manager panel and the Variables panel. The Data Manager panel is a new feature in UiPath 2022.10 that allows the developer to manage all the data elements of a project, such as variables, arguments, data types, and data sources. The Variables panel is a classic feature that allows the developer to create and edit variables for a specific workflow. To create a Global Constant from the Data Manager panel, the developer needs to select the Constants tab, click on the New Constant button, and fill in the required fields, such as name, type, value, and description. To create a Global Constant from the Variables panel, the developer needs to select the Global scope, click on the Create Variable button, and fill in the required fields, such as name, type, value, and description. In both cases, the developer needs to make sure that the Is Constant option is checked, which indicates that the variable is a constant and cannot be changed.

NEW QUESTION # 72
You are invoking a workflow file called "SecondaryWorkflow.xaml" from "PrimaryWorkflow.xamr. The following shows the Import Arguments panel of the Invoke Workflow File activity:

In addition, the following reflects the Arguments panel in "SecondaryWorkflow.xaml":

You use a Log Message activity in "SecondaryWorkflow.xamr to print the value of the argument "in_Message". What is the expected result of executing "PrimaryWorkflow.xaml"?

- A. A System.ArgumentException is thrown at the Invoke Workflow File activity.
- B. Log message "This is the second file".
- C. Log message "Invoked from the first file".
- D. The Log Message activity displays an empty string.

Answer: C

Explanation:
In the given scenario, the "SecondaryWorkflow.xaml" is invoked from "PrimaryWorkflow.xaml" with an argument "in_Message".
The Import Arguments panel of the Invoke Workflow File activity in "PrimaryWorkflow.xaml" is showing that the value "Invoked from the first file" is passed to
"SecondaryWorkflow.xaml". Since the "SecondaryWorkflow.xaml" has an argument "in_Message" with the default value "This is the second file", this default value is overridden by the value provided during the invoke action. Therefore, when the Log Message activity in "SecondaryWorkflow.xaml" is executed, it will log
"Invoked from the first file", making option B correct.

NEW QUESTION # 73
Your team wants to build a cross-platform automation that runs on different systems, including Windows, Mac, and Linux. How does Studio Web support this requirement?

- A. Studio Web only supports automation on Linux and Mac systems, but not on Windows systems.
- B. Studio Web automations run on serverless robots that are provisioned for you and can run on Windows, Mac, or Linux robots.
- C. Studio Web automations require a specific Windows robot to be installed on each operating system before running on different platforms.
- D. Studio Web automations are cloud-based but must be run exclusively on Windows robots.

* These robots can execute on Windows, Mac, or Linux, making them platform-independent.
* No need for manual robot installation on each machine.
Why Other Options Are Incorrect?
* A (Must run exclusively on Windows robots) #
* Incorrect. Studio Web supports Mac, Linux, and Windows.

* B (Only supports Linux and Mac, not Windows) #
* Incorrect. Studio Web is platform-independent.
* D (Requires a Windows robot on each system) #

NEW QUESTION # 74
What differentiates a List type from an Array type?

- A. An array has a fixed, predefined number of elements while a list has a dynamic number of elements.
- B. List items can be accessed through an index but array items cannot.
- C. A list can hold items of multiple data types at the same time while arrays cannot.
- D. Lists provide the option of looping through data while arrays do not.

Answer: A

Explanation:
Both list and arrays are a collection type of variables that can store multiple values of the same data type. The main difference between them is if their size is fixed or not. Array has a fixed size, meaning that if you create an array containing 3 elements, you can't add more than 3 or reduce its size. List has a dynamic size, meaning that you can add or remove elements as you need. List also provides some methods that can be invoked to perform operations on the elements, such as sorting, reversing, finding, etc. Array does not have such methods, but it is more optimized for arithmetic computations.
