EC-COUNCIL EC Council Certified Incident Handler (ECIH v3) Sample Questions (Q147-Q152):

NEW QUESTION # 147
Sam, an employee of a multinational company, sends emails to third-party organizations with a spoofed email address of his organization.
How can you categorize this type of incident?

- A. Denial-of-service incident

- B. Network intrusion incident
- C. Unauthorized access incident
- D. Inappropriate usage incident

Answer: D

NEW QUESTION # 148
John is a professional hacker who is performing an attack on the target organization where he tries to redirect the connection between the IP address and its target server such that when the users type in the Internet address, it redirects them to a rogue website that resembles the original website. He tries this attack using cache poisoning technique. Identify the type of attack John is performing on the target organization.

- A. Skimming
- B. War driving
- C. Pharming
- D. Pretexting

Answer: C

NEW QUESTION # 149
QualTech Solutions is a leading security services enterprise. Dickson works as an incident responder with this firm. He is performing vulnerability assessment to identify the security problems in the network, using automated tools to identify the hosts, services, and vulnerabilities present in the enterprise network.
Based on the above scenario, identify the type of vulnerability assessment performed by Dickson.

- A. Passive assessment
- B. External assessment
- C. Active assessment
- D. Internal assessment

Answer: B

Explanation:
An active assessment involves using automated tools to scan and probe the network actively to identify hosts, services, and vulnerabilities. This type of assessment directly interacts with the network components to gather information about the existing security posture, unlike passive assessments, which analyze traffic without sending packets to the target systems. Dickson's approach, employing automated tools to identify the network's hosts, services, and vulnerabilities, fits the definition of an active assessment. This method provides a more immediate understanding of the network's vulnerabilities, allowing for timely remediation actions.
References:The ECIH v3 program includes discussions on vulnerability assessment techniques, highlighting the differences between active and passive assessments and their applicability in identifying network security issues.

NEW QUESTION # 150
Attackers or insiders create a backdoor into a trusted network by installing an unsecured access point inside a firewall. They then use any software or hardware access point to perform an attack. Which of the following is this type of attack?

- A. Password-based attack
- B. Malware attack
- C. Rogue- access point attack
- D. Email infection

Answer: C

NEW QUESTION # 151
An attacker after performing an attack decided to wipe evidences using artifact wiping techniques to evade forensic investigation. He applied magnetic field to the digital media device, resulting in an entirely clean device of any previously stored data.

Identify the artifact wiping technique used by the attacker.

- A. Disk degaussing/destruction
- B. Disk cleaning utilities
- C. Syscall proxying
- D. File wiping utilities

Answer: A

Explanation:
The technique described, where an attacker applies a magnetic field to a digital media device to clean it of any previously stored data, is known as disk degaussing. Degaussing is a method used to erase a disk or tape by exposing it to a strong magnetic field, destroying the magnetic data storage mechanism and leaving the device clean of any data. This process is effectively used for wiping digital evidence in a way that makes recovery impossible, serving as a method of anti-forensics. Unlike file wiping utilities or disk cleaning utilities, which overwrite or delete data (potentially leaving traces that can be recovered), degaussing physically alters the storage medium itself, making data recovery unfeasible.
References:The ECIH v3 certification program discusses various artifact wiping techniques, including degaussing, as part of understanding anti-forensic methods that attackers use to evade detection and investigation.
