NEW QUESTION # 26

In which scenario will an administrator need to manually define Proxy ARP?

- A. When they configure an "Automatic Hide NAT" which translates to an IP address that does not belong to one of the firewall's interfaces.
- B. When they configure a "Manual Hide NAT" which translates to an IP address that belongs to one of the firewall's interfaces.
- C. When they configure an "Automatic Static NAT" which translates to an IP address that does not belong to one of the firewall's interfaces.
- D. When they configure a "Manual Static NAT" which translates to an IP address that does not belong to one of the firewall's interfaces.

Answer: D

Explanation:

NAT (Network Address Translation) is a technique that modifies the IP addresses or ports of packets that pass through a security gateway. NAT can be configured in two ways: Automatic or Manual. Automatic NAT means that the NAT rules are generated automatically by the security gateway based on the NAT properties of network objects. Manual NAT means that the NAT rules are defined explicitly by the administrator in the NAT policy. Proxy ARP (Address Resolution Protocol) is a technique that allows a security gateway to answer ARP requests on behalf of other hosts. Proxy ARP is needed when a host on one network segment tries to communicate with a host on another network segment that has a different IP address than its own. In some scenarios, an administrator will need to manually define Proxy ARP for NAT to work properly. One such scenario is when they configure a Manual Static NAT which translates to an IP address that does not belong to one of the firewall's interfaces. From SecureXL perspective, what are the tree paths of traffic flow:

- A. Initial Path; Medium Path; Accelerated Path
- B. Firewall Path; Accept Path; Drop Path
- C. Firewall Path; Accelerated Path; Medium Path
- D. Layer Path; Blade Path; Rule Path

Answer: C

Explanation:

The correct answer is D because from SecureXL perspective, the three paths of traffic flow are Firewall Path, Accelerated Path, and Medium Path. The Firewall Path is used when SecureXL is disabled or traffic is not eligible for acceleration. The Accelerated Path is used when SecureXL handles the entire connection and bypasses the Firewall kernel. The Medium Path is used when SecureXL handles part of the connection and forwards packets to the Firewall kernel for further inspection. The other options are not valid paths of traffic flow from SecureXL perspective. Check Point R81 Performance Tuning Administration Guide
