Saviynt Certified Advanced IGA Professional (Level 200) Sample Questions (Q43-Q48):

NEW QUESTION # 43

Which of these is NOT a valid campaign type in EIC?

- A. Application Owner Meta Data Campaign
- B. SAV Role Campaign
- C. User Manager Campaign
- D. Organization Owner Campaign

Answer: A

Explanation:

In Saviynt EIC, Campaigns (Certifications) are used to review and validate user access, ensuring compliance and governance. Saviynt provides several predefined campaign types based on different ownership and responsibility models.

User Manager Campaign (A) is a valid campaign type where managers review and certify access of their direct reports. This is one of the most commonly used certification types.

SAV Role Campaign (B) is also valid and focuses on reviewing access related to SAV roles, allowing role owners or administrators to validate role assignments.

Organization Owner Campaign (D) is another valid campaign type, typically used when organizational hierarchy or ownership structures are leveraged for certification responsibilities.

Option C (Application Owner Meta Data Campaign) is not a valid standard campaign type in Saviynt. While application owner-based campaigns do exist (e.g., Entitlement Owner or Application Owner campaigns),

"Meta Data Campaign" is not a recognized or supported campaign category in Saviynt EIC.

Thus, the correct answer is C, as it does not correspond to any valid campaign type in Saviynt.

NEW QUESTION # 44

Schema based account import job failed with Schema definition file not found and No SAV file found. Which of the following could be the possible reasons for the same? (Multi-Select)

- A. datafile (.csv extension) is not present in File Directory - > Data files location
- B. SAV file with .sav extension is missing in the File Directory - > SAV files location
- C. SAV file with .sav extension is missing in the File Directory - > Data files location
- D. SAV file format is incorrect

Answer: B,D

Explanation:

In Saviynt EIC, schema-based account import jobs rely heavily on the SAV file, which acts as the schema definition for interpreting incoming data. The error message "Schema definition file not found and No SAV file found" specifically indicates that Saviynt is unable to locate or process the required SAV file.

Option A is correct because the SAV file must be placed in the designated File Directory # SAV files location.

If the file is missing from this directory, the system cannot read the schema definition, resulting in job failure.

Option D is also correct because even if the SAV file is present, an incorrectly formatted or corrupted SAV file will prevent Saviynt from parsing it properly, leading to the same error.

Option B is incorrect since SAV files are not expected in the Data files directory. Option C is unrelated to this specific error, as missing CSV files would generate a different error related to missing data, not schema definition.

Thus, the issue is specifically tied to missing or invalid SAV schema files.

NEW QUESTION # 45

A target application exposes REST APIs and you need Saviynt to perform imports as well as provisioning and deprovisioning. Which connector approach is the most appropriate?

- A. SMTP Configuration
- B. Active Directory Connector
- C. REST Connector
- D. Dataset Configuration

Answer: C

Explanation:

The correct answer is B. REST Connector . Saviynt documentation explains that REST integration is intended for applications whose data and lifecycle actions are available through REST endpoints. It states that the REST integration enables organizations to gain visibility, manage the user lifecycle, and govern access for data available in the REST application or REST endpoint. That directly matches the question, which requires imports plus provisioning and deprovisioning for an API-driven target system. Saviynt's REST connector documentation also notes that provisioning and deprovisioning are supported when the connection is configured correctly. This makes the REST connector the standard choice when the target system does not use an out-of-the-box native connector but does provide usable REST APIs. The other options do not fit the requirement. Active Directory Connector is specific to AD use cases, SMTP Configuration is only for email delivery, and Dataset Configuration is an administrative data-structuring feature rather than an application integration method. In Saviynt Level 200 terms, when an application is API- first and lifecycle actions must be automated, the REST connector is the appropriate design decision.

NEW QUESTION # 46

The EIC Administrator observed that all accounts were disabled in Saviynt due to incorrect configuration in the target application. What controls can be implemented in Saviynt to avoid such scenarios?

- A. Set the limit in the external config file
- B. Use the accountThresholdValue attribute in the STATUS_THRESHOLD_CONFIG connection parameter
- C. Use the accEntThresholdValue attribute in the STATUS_THRESHOLD_CONFIG connection parameter
- D. It is not possible to set a limit

Answer: B

Explanation:

In Saviynt EIC, mass unintended changes-such as all accounts being disabled due to incorrect target application configuration-can be prevented using threshold-based controls. These controls are defined using the STATUS_THRESHOLD_CONFIG connection parameter, which acts as a safeguard during reconciliation and provisioning processes.

The correct attribute in this scenario is accountThresholdValue (Option D). This parameter allows administrators to define a threshold limit for account status changes (such as disablement). If the number or percentage of accounts being disabled exceeds the defined threshold, Saviynt can stop or flag the operation, preventing large-scale unintended impact.

Option A (accEntThresholdValue) is used for entitlement-level thresholds, not account status changes.

Option B is incorrect because Saviynt does provide this safeguard mechanism. Option C is also incorrect since such controls are not managed externally but are part of Saviynt's connector configuration.

By using accountThresholdValue within STATUS_THRESHOLD_CONFIG, organizations can implement strong governance and prevent bulk account disablement due to misconfigurations or data issues during account import or reconciliation.

NEW QUESTION # 47

An EIC Administrator has created a workflow containing hidden dynamic attributes; however, the administrator is unable to fetch the value of the hidden Dynamic Attributes in the request. How can this issue be resolved?

- A. Enable the "Save Hidden Dynamic Attribute Default Value" setting in Global Config
- B. Enable the "Expose hidden dynamic attributes in workflow" setting in Global Config
- C. Enable the "Enable use for default attributes in workflow" setting in Global Config
- D. Enable the "Expose hidden dynamic attributes in workflow" setting in Endpoint

Answer: B

Explanation:

In Saviynt EIC, Dynamic Attributes are often used in request forms to capture additional information, and some of these attributes may be configured as hidden fields for backend processing. By default, hidden dynamic attributes are not exposed in workflows, which can prevent administrators from accessing their values during request processing.

To resolve this issue, Saviynt provides a specific configuration in Global Configurations called "Expose hidden dynamic attributes in workflow". Enabling this setting (Option A) ensures that even if the dynamic attributes are hidden in the UI, their values are still accessible within workflows for processing, approvals, and provisioning logic. Option B is incorrect because this setting is not configured at the endpoint level. Option C relates to saving default values but does not ensure visibility in workflows. Option D is unrelated to hidden attribute exposure. Thus, enabling the Global Config setting to expose hidden dynamic attributes is the correct solution to ensure their values are available within workflow execution.
