NAHQ Certified Professional in Healthcare Quality Examination Sample Questions (Q602-Q607):

NEW QUESTION # 602

The hospital administration has requested data to support an initiative to reduce barriers to healthcare in the community. Which of the following information is most appropriate for the quality professional to provide for initial planning?

- A. reports from the public health department showing pediatric obesity rates
- B. top 10 admission diagnoses and readmission report
- C. community planning maps showing transportation routes
- D. demographic data showing occupations and housing types of the area

Answer: D

Explanation:

When planning an initiative to reduce barriers to healthcare in the community, it's important to understand the demographic makeup of the area. This includes information about occupations and housing types, which can provide insights into socioeconomic status, access to transportation, and other factors that may affect healthcare access.

Community planning maps showing transportation routes (Option A) could be useful in later stages of planning, particularly when considering the location of healthcare facilities or services. However, this information is not as fundamental as demographic data for initial planning.

Reports from the public health department showing pediatric obesity rates (Option C) could be relevant if the initiative specifically targets pediatric health or obesity. However, for a general initiative to reduce

NEW QUESTION # 603

A strategy to address social determinants of health would be to

- A. implement a standard questionnaire for pediatric lead screening.
- B. identify high-risk patients with high-cost medications.
- C. launch a community campaign to promote influenza vaccines.
- D. create patient education materials that are culturally competent.

Answer: D

Explanation:

A strategy to address social determinants of health involves creating patient education materials that are culturally competent. Culturally competent materials consider the cultural, linguistic, and literacy needs of the patient population, making the information accessible and relevant. This approach helps to bridge gaps in understanding and engagement, which are often influenced by social determinants such as education, income, and cultural background.

Launch a community campaign to promote influenza vaccines (A): While important for public health, this is not directly focused on social determinants of health.

Identify high-risk patients with high-cost medications (B): This is more related to cost management and clinical care than addressing social determinants.

Implement a standard questionnaire for pediatric lead screening (D): This addresses a specific health issue but does not broadly address social determinants of health.

- B. health equity.
- C. community health.
- D. global health.

Answer: B

NEW QUESTION # 606

The health department cited a clinic for storing used instruments improperly. From a quality perspective, which of the following should be done first?

- A. Submit a statement of deficiencies.
- B. Educate staff on the requirements.

- C. Conduct an audit of the corrective action.
- D. Prepare a detailed action plan.

Answer: B

Explanation:

When the health department cites a clinic for improper storage of used instruments, the most immediate and effective first step from a quality perspective is to educate staff on the requirements for proper instrument storage.

Here's why:

Immediate Risk Mitigation: Educating staff ensures that they understand the correct procedures for instrument storage, which helps to immediately mitigate any risks associated with improper practices.

This step directly addresses the root cause of the citation, which is a lack of adherence to proper protocols.

Prevent Recurrence: By providing education and training, the clinic can prevent the recurrence of similar issues. Staff who are well-informed about the correct procedures are less likely to repeat mistakes, thereby improving overall compliance and reducing the likelihood of future citations.

Foundation for Further Actions: Education lays the groundwork for all subsequent actions, such as preparing action plans or conducting audits. Without ensuring that the staff is knowledgeable about the requirements, other steps may not be as effective.

Regulatory Compliance: Educating staff is also a necessary step to ensure the clinic meets regulatory requirements. It demonstrates the clinic's commitment to compliance and patient safety, which may be beneficial in interactions with regulatory bodies.
