SailPoint Certified IdentityIQ Associate Exam Sample Questions (Q62-Q67):

NEW QUESTION # 62

Is this statement true for the identity refresh task?

It references the application definitions to determine how to connect to the native systems.

- A. Yes
- B. No

Answer: B

Explanation:

The statement is false. The Identity Refresh task does not use application definitions to determine how to connect to native target systems. That function belongs to application aggregation and connector-based operations. In IdentityIQ, an application definition contains the connector configuration, schemas, correlation settings, aggregation options, and provisioning-related settings required for IdentityIQ to communicate with a managed system.

The Identity Refresh task operates primarily on identity data already present inside IdentityIQ. It updates IdentityCubes by recalculating identity attributes, refreshing role assignments and detections, evaluating policies, processing lifecycle events, updating manager relationships, and applying selected identity model calculations. It is typically run after aggregation or configuration changes so that identity-level governance data reflects current account and entitlement information.

Therefore, connecting to native systems is not the purpose of Identity Refresh. IdentityIQ connects to native systems through aggregation tasks or provisioning operations that reference the application definitions and connectors. Identity Refresh consumes the resulting identity, account, entitlement, and application link data within the IdentityIQ repository.

Reference topics: Identity Modeling - Identity Refresh options; Applications - application definitions and connector settings; Foundational Concepts - tasks versus workflows; Provisioning - connector-based fulfillment.

NEW QUESTION # 63

Is this statement about uncorrelated accounts true?

Uncorrelated Identity Cubes are removed from IdentityIQ after 30 days.

- A. Yes
- B. No

Answer: B

Explanation:

The statement is false. IdentityIQ does not apply a universal rule that removes uncorrelated IdentityCubes after 30 days.

Uncorrelated accounts or uncorrelated identity records result from aggregation and correlation processing when IdentityIQ cannot confidently associate an account from an application with an existing IdentityCube. These records remain available for administrative review and remediation until they are resolved through correlation logic, manual correlation, re-aggregation, identity refresh activity, or configured cleanup processes.

The key point is that retention and removal behavior is configuration-driven, not controlled by a fixed 30-day product rule.

Administrators may use tasks, aggregation settings, pruning behavior, or lifecycle processes to clean up stale identity or account data, but such actions depend on implementation choices and task configuration. IdentityIQ preserves uncorrelated data because it may represent a real account requiring governance, certification, policy evaluation, or investigation.

Therefore, the assertion that uncorrelated IdentityCubes are automatically removed after 30 days is incorrect. Reference topics: Applications, uncorrelated account resolution, correlation configuration, aggregation results, IdentityCube association, identity refresh, and administrative cleanup tasks.

NEW QUESTION # 64

Is this a purpose of identity governance and administration (IGA)?

Detecting and addressing inappropriate access

- A. Yes
- B. No

Answer: A

Explanation:

Detecting and addressing inappropriate access is a core purpose of Identity Governance and Administration in SailPoint IdentityIQ. IdentityIQ is designed to provide visibility into who has access, what access they have, how that access was obtained, whether it is appropriate, and what corrective action should occur when access violates business or security policy. Inappropriate access may be identified through access certifications, policy violations, role analysis, entitlement review, account aggregation, and identity correlation.

IdentityIQ supports this purpose by building IdentityCubes that consolidate identity, account, entitlement, role, and manager data from connected applications. Once access is visible, governance controls such as certifications allow managers, application owners, or entitlement owners to approve, revoke, or delegate access decisions. Policies can also detect toxic combinations, prohibited access, or access inconsistent with business rules. Remediation can then be routed through provisioning, work items, or manual fulfillment processes.

Therefore, the statement aligns directly with IGA and IdentityIQ's identity security model. Reference topic:

Foundational Concepts - purpose of identity security; also related to Governance - certifications, policy detection, and remediation.

NEW QUESTION # 65

Is this an accurate statement about access reviews and certifications?
The two phases of a certification are "active" and "inactive".

- A. Yes
- B. No

Answer: B

Explanation:

The statement is inaccurate. In SailPoint IdentityIQ, certifications are not modeled as having only two phases called "active" and "inactive." A certification has a defined lifecycle that controls how review items are generated, reviewed, challenged, remediated, and closed. "Active" may describe a certification that is currently open for reviewer decisions, but "inactive" is not a corresponding certification phase that completes the lifecycle model.

A typical IdentityIQ certification process includes review activity where certifiers approve, revoke, delegate, or otherwise act on access items. Depending on configuration, the certification may also include challenge and remediation behavior, allowing affected users or responsible parties to respond to revocation decisions and enabling fulfillment of required access removals. After review and required processing are complete, the certification is signed off or closed.

Therefore, reducing certification behavior to only "active" and "inactive" misrepresents IdentityIQ's access review model.

Certifications are governance workflows with multiple operational states and review phases, not a binary status flag. Reference topics: Governance, access reviews, certification lifecycle, certification phases, challenge period, remediation, revocation processing, and certification sign-off.

NEW QUESTION # 66

Does this statement accurately describe how roles are acquired by users in the default role model configuration?
Business roles can only be requested by managers.

- A. Yes
- B. No

Answer: B

Explanation:

No. This statement does not accurately describe role acquisition in IdentityIQ. Business roles are not restricted to being requested only by managers. In IdentityIQ, roles may be acquired through role assignment logic, role detection, access requests, or administrative action, depending on the role configuration and the organization's request model.

A business role commonly represents access associated with a business function, job, department, location, or organizational responsibility. Users may receive business roles automatically when their identity attributes satisfy configured role profiles or assignment rules, typically recalculated during Identity Refresh. Separately, roles may be made requestable through Lifecycle Manager and exposed through QuickLinks, where request eligibility is controlled by QuickLink Populations, request configuration, and workflow rules.

Managers may be allowed to request roles for direct reports, but that is only one possible configuration.

IdentityIQ can also allow users to request roles for themselves, allow delegated requesters to request for others, or restrict requests to specific populations.

Therefore, "only requested by managers" is too narrow and incorrect. Reference topics: Access Modeling, business roles, role assignment, role detection, Identity Refresh, User-Driven Requests, QuickLink Populations, and role request configuration.
