Captures clips of key security-related user activities, such as the exfiltration of sensitive company data.

Integrates data loss prevention (DLP) capabilities with insider risk management.

Explanation:

Captures clips of key security-related user activities

This requirement refers to recording and surfacing evidence of risky user behavior (e.g., copying sensitive files to USB, uploading to cloud storage, or exfiltrating data).

In Microsoft Purview Insider Risk Management, this is achieved through Forensic evidence, which allows capturing screenshots/clips of user activities on endpoints when a policy is triggered.

Integrates DLP capabilities with insider risk management

Microsoft introduced Adaptive Protection as part of Purview Insider Risk.

Adaptive Protection uses insider risk signals and DLP together, dynamically adjusting DLP controls (block, restrict, monitor) based on the user's risk level.

This integration reduces false positives and ensures risky users are monitored more strictly while low-risk users are less impacted.

Other options ruled out:

Adaptive scopes: Used for defining policy targeting groups dynamically, not capturing activities.

Defining rules for Microsoft Purview Message Encryption

One way to enable Microsoft Purview Message Encryption is for Exchange Online and Exchange Online Protection administrators to define mail flow rules. These rules determine under what conditions email messages should be encrypted. When an encryption action is set for a rule, any messages that match the rule conditions are encrypted before they're sent.

Mail flow rules are flexible, letting you combine conditions so you can meet specific security requirements in a single rule. For example, you can create a rule to encrypt all messages that contain specified keywords and are addressed to external recipients.

Microsoft Purview Message Encryption also encrypts replies from recipients of encrypted email.
