NEW QUESTION # 20

A company wants to analyze the audience they have created before they activate it to an upcoming Email campaign. What is the recommended approach to extract this audience?

- A. Extract the audience using a custom HTTP API
- B. Create a query via data distiller and extract the resulting audience
- C. Create a segment and configure a destination to extract the audience
- D. Create a segment, run the segment export job, and share the audience through dataset export

Answer: C

NEW QUESTION # 21

A data engineer needs to ingest batch data from a third-party customer relationship management (CRM) system into Adobe Real-Time CDP for a major holiday marketing campaign. What should the engineer check for in the initial stages of creating a manual dataflow when considering the batch ingestion framework?

- A. If the dataset is configured to trigger the ingestion immediately after the creation of the dataflow
- B. If the target schema is already associated with the dataset in the dataflow
- C. If the data complies with the legal aspects of Adobe Terms and Conditions
- D. If the file is in a supported format

Answer: D

Explanation:

When setting up a manual batch dataflow in Adobe Experience Platform, the first technical hurdle is ensuring that the source file is compatible with the platform's ingestion engine. Adobe Real-Time CDP supports specific file formats for batch ingestion, primarily Parquet and JSON. If the CRM data is exported as a CSV, the engineer must ensure it follows strict formatting rules or convert it to a supported format to prevent ingestion failures during the validation stage.

Checking the file format (Option B) is a foundational step because the ingestion service validates the file structure against the target XDM schema immediately upon upload. While the target schema must indeed be associated with the dataset (Option A), this is a step within the dataflow creation process rather than a preliminary check of the batch data itself. Option C is a legal/governance concern rather than a technical framework requirement for dataflow creation. Option D is incorrect because batch ingestion is typically scheduled or triggered manually; it is not a "trigger-on-creation" mechanism like streaming. Ensuring the file format is correct is the primary "pre-flight" check to guarantee that the mapping interface can correctly interpret the source fields for the marketing campaign data.

NEW QUESTION # 22

Given the following schema field:

Schema Field: personEmail.address

Core Labels Applied: I1 and I2

Custom Labels Applied: CUSTOM_1 and CUSTOM_2

Assuming the Default Access Policy is enabled, what is the fewest amount of label(s) added to a user's role in order to access the above schema field?

- A. Add "I1 and CUSTOM_2" to the access role
- B. Add "I1 and I2" to the access role
- C. Add "I1 and I2" and "CUSTOM_1" to the access role
- D. Add "I1 or I2 or CUSTOM_1 or CUSTOM_2" to the access role

Answer: C

NEW QUESTION # 23

A Marketing Specialist in a travel agency firm has imported an externally created audience which contained a "Destination.City" attribute into Adobe Experience Platform. The Marketing Specialist then wanted to use this attribute in segment builder to combine with other Event attributes to create a more complex audience but is facing challenges with building the new audience. What is the reason for the issue the Marketing Specialist is facing?

- A. External audience attributes can only be combined with Profile attributes and not Event attributes.
- B. External audience attributes are non-durable and not linked to the unified profile for segmentation
- C. External audience attributes first need to be linked with the schema fields before using in segment builder.
- D. External audience attributes can only be used in segmentation APIs and not segment builder

Answer: B

Explanation:

When an audience is imported into Adobe Experience Platform from an external source (like a CSV upload or a partner destination), it is treated as an External Audience. Unlike audiences natively generated within AEP, external audiences are "non-durable" by default regarding their metadata. This means that while the platform knows which profiles belong to that audience, the specific attributes associated with that external list (such as "Destination.City") are not automatically ingested into the Real-Time Customer Profile as permanent attributes.

The "challenges" mentioned occur because the Segment Builder requires attributes to be part of an XDM schema to perform complex cross-attribute filtering. Because the "Destination.City" attribute exists only within the context of the external audience membership and is not linked to the unified profile schema, it cannot be used in a join with behavioral Event attributes.

Option A is incorrect because external audiences are limited in combination with any other dynamic criteria in the visual builder unless they are first converted into profile attributes. Option D is a potential workaround but does not explain the reason for the immediate failure. Option C is incorrect as the UI does support basic external audience selection. The fundamental issue is that external attributes are transient and not part of the XDM Profile store, thus they lack the relational "glue" required for complex segmentation logic involving time-series events.
