UiPath Automation Solution Architect Professional v1.0 Exam Sample Questions (Q146-Q151):

NEW QUESTION # 146
What is the use case of the following diagram?

- A. Natural Language Processing
- B. Credit Note Processing
- C. Invoice Processing
- D. Human Action Processing

Answer: C

Explanation:
The use case of the diagram is Invoice Processing. The diagram represents a typical workflow in a document processing scenario using UiPath RPA tools. It shows the process starting from document collection from emails and SharePoint folders, processing attachments, classifying documents, and handling exceptions until the final step of invoice type classification.
The workflow involves various components of UiPath such as queues in Orchestrator for managing work items, actions by Subject Matter Experts (SMEs) for validation, and use of the Storage Buckets for storing information. It also shows the handling of different document types and exceptions, which is typical in invoice processing scenarios where not all documents are standardized and may require human intervention.

NEW QUESTION # 147
Which is the best approach to invite 100 users simultaneously to UiPath Automation Cloud?

- A. Inviting each user individually.
- B. Inviting users in bulk
- C. Creating robot accounts.
- D. Adding the users to a group.

Answer: B

Explanation:
Inviting users in bulk is the best approach to invite 100 users simultaneously to UiPath Automation Cloud. This method allows you to use a .csv file containing the users to be invited and the user groups they belong to. You can invite up to 1000 users simultaneously with one CSV file1. This is more efficient and convenient than creating robot accounts, inviting each user individually, or adding the users to a group.

What functionality does the Package Explorer offer?

- A. Explore the graphical representation of any .xml file without having access to the variables, arguments, and imports that are part of any package version.
- B. Explore the graphical representation of only the entry xml file without having access to the variable, arguments, and imports that are part of any package version.
- C. Explore the graphical representation of nay .xml file as well as the variables, arguments, and imports that are part of any package version.
- D. Explorer the graphical representation of only the entry xml file as well as the variables, arguments, and imports that are part of the latest package version.

Answer: C

Explanation:
Package Explorer is a feature that enables you to view the contents of any package version uploaded to Orchestrator. You can access it from the Packages page, by clicking the Explore button next to the package name. Package Explorer displays a graphical representation of the entry .xml file of the package, as well as the variables, arguments, and imports that are part of it. You can also view the properties of each activity, such as selectors, text, or output variables. Package Explorer can help you troubleshoot errors, compare different versions of a package, or inspect the logic of a package without opening it in Studio.

NEW QUESTION # 149

What is the recommended UiPath Studio template to be used for long-running workflows?

- A. Attended Automation Framework
- B. No framework is needed
- C. Robotic Enterprise Framework (ReFramework).
- D. Orchestration Process Template

Answer: D

Explanation:
Long-running workflows are processes that require logical fragmentation or human intervention (validations, approvals, exception handling) such as invoice processing and performance reviews. UiPath provides a dedicated project template in Studio called Orchestration Process, which enables the use of a set of activities to handle these scenarios. The Orchestration Process template allows the workflow to be suspended and resumed based on certain conditions, such as the completion of a job, a queue item, a form task, or an external task. The template also integrates with UiPath Action Center, which is a feature that enables human intervention in long-running unattended workflows. The Orchestration Process template is the recommended option for designing and developing long-running workflows in UiPath Studio. References:

NEW QUESTION # 150

Considering the following scenario:

We have a customer who has a on-premises installation of the Orchestration and wants to start a new project with Documents Understanding and ML. the project must be deployed into production in 6 weeks, but AI Center and Document Understanding are not available (not installed).

Considering the following

- any cloud solution must undergo an approval process that takes roughly 4 weeks for any production usage and 2 weeks for development lasting

- getting the hardware resources for an on-premise installation will take roughly 5 weeks and the costs are barely fitting the customer budget.

- the Orchestrator installation must remain unchanged

Which deployment option minimizes the risks for the process to reach production in time?

- A. Hybrid Mode (Orchestrate on premise Al Center Document Understanding in cloud)
- B. On-premise Mode (Orchestrator on-premise Al Center Document Understating stand-alone installation)
- C. On-premise Mode (Orchestrator on-premise Al Center/Document Understanding Automation Suite installation)
- D. Cloud Mode (Orchestrator, Al Center/Document Understanding in cloud)

Answer: A

Explanation:

According to the UiPath documentation, a hybrid mode deployment allows you to use the existing on-premise Orchestrator installation and connect it to the cloud-based AI Center and Document Understanding services1. This way, you can leverage the benefits of cloud computing, such as scalability, flexibility, and lower costs, without compromising the security and stability of your Orchestrator1. Moreover, a hybrid mode deployment can be faster and easier than a full cloud or on-premise mode, as it does not require a lengthy approval process or hardware provisioning23.
