ServiceNow Certified Application Developer-ServiceNow Sample Questions (Q115-Q120):

NEW QUESTION # 115
Which platform feature can be used to determine the relationships between field in an Import Set table to field in an existing ServiceNow table?

- A. Data Sources
- B. Transform Map
- C. Business Service Management Map
- D. CI Relationship Builder

Answer: B

Explanation:
A transform map determines the relationships between fields displaying in an Import Set table and fields in an existing ServiceNow table, such as the Incidents or Users table.
Reference:
The following platform feature can be used to determine the relationships between fields in an Import Set table to fields in an existing ServiceNow table:
Transform Map. This is a feature that defines the mapping between the fields of an Import Set table and the fields of a target table, such as incident, problem, or user. A transform map also specifies the logic and rules for transforming the imported data, such as coalescing, scripting, or applying data policies.
The following platform features are not used to determine the relationships between fields in an Import Set table to fields in an existing ServiceNow table:
Business Service Management Map. This is a feature that provides a graphical representation of the configuration items (CIs) and their relationships in the Configuration Management Database (CMDB). A Business Service Management Map can be used to visualize the impact of incidents, changes, or problems on the CIs and the services they support.
Data Sources. This is a feature that defines the connection and authentication information for an external data source, such as a file, a JDBC database, or a web service. A data source is used to import data from the external source into an Import Set table.
CI Relationship Builder. This is a feature that creates relationships between CIs in the CMDB based on predefined or custom rules. A CI Relationship Builder can be used to populate the CMDB with the dependencies and connections between the CIs. NEW QUESTION # 116
What occurs when an existing table is extended in ServiceNow?

- A. The new table inherits the functionality built into the parent table
- B. The new table does not inherit any of the fields from the parent table
- C. You must script and configure all required behaviors
- D. The parent table's Access Controls are ignored when determining access to the new table's records and fields

Answer: A

Explanation:
In ServiceNow, extending a table means creating a new table (child class) that inherits properties from an existing table (parent class). This inheritance includes fields, business logic, and other configurations, allowing for efficient reuse and customization.
Key Points:
* Field Inheritance: The child table inherits all fields from the parent table. For example, if you extend the Task table, your new table will include fields like "short_description" and "priority."
* Business Logic Inheritance: The child table also inherits business rules, client scripts, and other logic defined on the parent table, ensuring consistent behavior across related tables.
* Access Controls: Access controls are not ignored; instead, the child table inherits the parent table's access controls. However, you can define additional access controls specific to the child table as needed.
* Customization: While the child table inherits many properties, you can add new fields, scripts, and behaviors to tailor it to specific requirements without affecting the parent table.
Reference: For more detailed information, please refer to the official ServiceNow documentation on Table Extension and Classes.
