ISACA Advanced in AI Audit Sample Questions (Q50-Q55):

NEW QUESTION # 50

The BEST way to prevent sensitive information disclosure by large language model (LLM) chatbots is through:

- A. Manual monitoring
- B. Data masking
- C. Access controls
- D. Data sanitization

Answer: B

NEW QUESTION # 51

An IS auditor is assessing the implementation of AI tools for evidence collection involving multiple data sources. Which of the following outcomes BEST indicates that AI-driven evidence collection has improved the audit process?

- A. Ability to rely on unstructured data with minimal cleansing
- B. Elimination of human judgment in data and evidence analysis
- C. Extended reporting timelines that allow for AI model retraining
- D. Reduced time spent gathering data with fewer errors in evidence compilation

Answer: D

Explanation:

AI-driven evidence collection should enhance efficiency and accuracy. The BEST indicator of improvement is reduced time spent gathering data with fewer errors (D), showing that AI has streamlined data extraction, consolidation, and initial validation without compromising quality. AAIA's content on AI in audit processes highlights benefits such as automation of repetitive tasks, improved coverage, and higher-quality evidence.

Extended timelines for retraining (A) suggest inefficiency rather than improvement. Eliminating human judgment (C) is neither realistic nor recommended; professional skepticism and auditor judgment remain essential. Relying on unstructured data with minimal cleansing (D) can increase risk of misinterpretation or noise. Therefore, more efficient and accurate evidence compilation is the clearest positive outcome.

NEW QUESTION # 52

Which of the following is MOST important for an IS auditor to consider when collecting data for analysis by AI tools?

- A. Data classification categories
- B. Data format and syntax requirements
- C. Model weights used for AI training
- D. Location of and access restrictions to the data

Answer: B

Explanation:

When collecting data for analysis by AI tools in an audit, the MOST important immediate consideration is that the data format and syntax align with the requirements of the AI tools (C). Without correct formatting (e.

g., structured fields, correct data types, consistent delimiters, proper encoding), AI tools may fail, misinterpret data, or generate unreliable results. AAIA's domain on AI in audit processes stresses data preparation, cleansing, and transformation as critical steps before applying AI analytics.

Data classification (A) and access restrictions (B) are significant from a security and privacy standpoint, but for the AI analysis itself to function correctly, the format/syntax is foundational. Model weights (D) relate to the AI training phase, not to the auditor's data collection step. Thus, ensuring the data provided to AI audit tools is properly structured and syntactically compatible is the primary technical concern.

NEW QUESTION # 53

To confirm the fairness of AI model decisions, the BEST way to collect reliable evidence during an AI audit is by:

- A. Testing the model with a curated sample data set.
- B. Analyzing system metadata.
- C. Interviewing developers.
- D. Observing the system's interactions with end users.

Answer: A

NEW QUESTION # 54

Which of the following is the GREATEST risk associated with using AI in audit planning?

- A. Incomplete data
- B. Scope creep
- C. Increased planning costs
- D. Limited knowledge

Answer: A

Explanation:

In the context of AI-driven audit planning, the AAIA™ Study Guide identifies incomplete or inaccurate data as the most significant risk. If the data input into AI tools is missing, outdated, or inconsistent, the model's suggestions for risk prioritization or control testing will be flawed.

"Audit planning supported by AI tools is only as strong as the underlying data. Incomplete data may cause incorrect risk assessments or misallocate audit resources, undermining audit effectiveness." While scope creep and cost are common concerns in project management, and limited AI knowledge can be mitigated through training, only incomplete data directly impacts the validity of audit planning outputs.
