NEW QUESTION # 60
What is the primary use of Martian addresses in network routing?

- A. To define addresses used for multicasting.
- B. To create a backup routing plan.
- C. To identify addresses that should be excluded from routing.
- D. To configure virtual IP addresses for load balancing.

Answer: C

NEW QUESTION # 61
Filter-based forwarding is typically used to:

- A. Increase the security of the routing process.
- B. Automatically generate routing entries.
- C. Optimize the routing table size.
- D. Implement policy-based routing decisions.

Answer: D

NEW QUESTION # 62
Which statement about switches is correct?

- A. Each port is in a unique broadcast domain by default.
- B. Every port is in a unique collision domain.
- C. Each port is a member of VLAN 2 by default.
- D. All ports reside in the same collision domain.

Answer: B

Explanation:
Each port on a modern switch creates a separate collision domain. This allows multiple devices to communicate simultaneously without collisions on different ports.
Step-by-Step Breakdown:
Collision Domain:
A collision domain is a network segment where data packets can collide if two devices send packets simultaneously.
On a switch, each port creates a separate collision domain, so collisions only occur if two devices connected to the same port (through a hub, for instance) try to send data at the same time.
Switches vs Hubs:
Unlike hubs, which have one large collision domain, switches isolate collisions to individual ports, improving performance.
Juniper Reference:
Switch Port Behavior: In Juniper switches, each port operates in its own collision domain, enhancing network efficiency by reducing the chances of packet collisions.

NEW QUESTION # 63
What information in the Ethernet header is used to populate the bridging table?

- A. source address
- B. protocol
- C. destination address
- D. type

Answer: A

Explanation:
The source MAC address in the Ethernet header is used to populate the bridging table (also called the MAC address table) on a switch. When a frame arrives at a switch, the switch examines the source MAC address and records it along with the ingress port in its MAC address table.
Step-by-Step Breakdown:
Learning Process:
When an Ethernet frame arrives on a switch port, the switch looks at the source MAC address and adds this MAC address to the MAC table along with the port it was received on. This process is called MAC learning.
Purpose:
The switch uses this information to determine the correct port to send frames destined for that MAC address in future transmissions, thus ensuring efficient Layer 2 forwarding. Juniper Reference: Ethernet Switching: Juniper switches use source MAC addresses to build and maintain the MAC address table, which is essential for Layer 2 switching.
