NEW QUESTION # 28

What field type would you select if you want to query records from another table on a form?

- A. Use the Date field type.
- B. Use the String field type.
- C. Use the Reference field type.
- D. Use the Phone Number field type.

Answer: C

Explanation:

Comprehensive and Detailed Step-by-Step Explanation:

* Reference Field Type:

* The Reference field type is used to create a relationship between two tables. It allows you to select and display records from another table directly on a form.

* For example, adding a "Caller" field to an Incident form enables you to query and select records from the sys_user table.

* Why Other Options Are Incorrect:

* Option B (Phone Number field type): This is used for storing phone numbers, not for querying records from another table.

* Option C (String field type): While this stores plain text, it does not allow querying or establishing relationships with other tables.

* Option D (Date field type): This is used for date or time values, not for referencing another table.

NEW QUESTION # 30

What is a characteristic of Modules?

- A. Every Module must be associated with a table
- B. Modules cannot open forms or lists
- C. Access to Modules is not controlled with roles
- D. Every Module must be part of an Application Menu

Answer: D

Explanation:

In ServiceNow, Modules are navigation elements that provide access to various parts of the platform, such as forms, lists, reports, or other application components. They are organized within Application Menus to create a structured and intuitive navigation hierarchy.

Key characteristics of Modules:

Part of Application Menus: Every module is contained within an application menu. This organization helps users navigate to different areas of the platform efficiently. For instance, the "Incident" application menu may contain modules like "Create New" or "All Incidents." Functionality: Modules can open various elements, including forms, lists, reports, or URLs. This flexibility allows modules to direct users to specific records, filtered lists, or external resources.

Association with Tables: While many modules are associated with specific tables (e.g., a module that displays a list of incidents is associated with the "Incident" table), it's not a strict requirement. Some modules may link to external URLs or perform actions not directly tied to a table.

Access Control: Access to modules is controlled through roles. Administrators can define which user roles have visibility and access to specific modules, ensuring that users only see modules relevant to their responsibilities.

For example, a module named "Active Incidents" under the "Incident" application menu might display a list of all active incident records. Access to this module can be restricted to users with the "itil" role, ensuring that only authorized personnel can view active incidents.

The privacy protection of users is an eternal issue in the internet age.
