- B. Validating month-end withholding totals
- C. Checking credit entries against the payroll register
- D. Verifying tax remittances

Answer: C

Reconciliation of taxes payable involves ensuring that payroll records, tax deposits, and government filings match. Essential steps include:

- * Verifying actual tax remittances made (A #)
- * Reviewing taxable wage bases for errors (B #)

NEW QUESTION # 47

All of the following employees may be exempt from the social security tax EXCEPT those employed by:

- A. local governments.
- B. private employers.
- C. state governments.
- D. public school districts.

Answer: B

Explanation:

Social Security tax is a mandatory federal tax for almost all workers in the United States, but specific historical exemptions exist within the public sector. Employees of state governments, local governments, and public school districts may be exempt if their employer has not entered into a Section 218 Agreement with the Social Security Administration. These workers are often covered by separate state or local retirement systems instead. However, employees of private employers (Option B) are almost universally subject to Social Security tax withholding and employer matching. The only rare exceptions in the private sector involve specific religious groups that have received IRS approval for exemption or certain non-resident aliens on specific student visas.

NEW QUESTION # 48

The employer may classify a worker as an independent contractor if the worker:

- A. Is retired or over age 65
- B. Furnishes his or her own tools and supplies
- C. Fails the common-law test
- D. Signs a contract

Answer: C

NEW QUESTION # 49

The FIRST step an employer must take after deciding to look for a new payroll system is:

- A. preparing an RFP.
- B. building a project team
- C. analyzing new system functionality.
- D. selecting a system.

Answer: B

Explanation:

Implementing a new payroll system is a complex project that impacts multiple departments, including HR, IT, Accounting, and Finance. According to the standard system implementation lifecycle, the first critical step after the decision to move forward is building a project team. This team should consist of stakeholders from all affected departments to ensure that the requirements of each group are considered. Once the team is established, they can proceed to analyze the current system's deficiencies (needs analysis) and document the functional requirements before preparing a Request for Proposal (RFP). Selecting a system or analyzing functionality without a dedicated project team and defined requirements increases the risk of choosing a system that does not meet the organization's long-term needs. Effective project management at this initial stage is essential for a successful "go-live."
