NEW QUESTION # 383

Users are directed to a form in a model-driven app through a special URL that passes values for three lookup columns. The form consists of three tabs: A, which is the default tab, B, and C. The form has JavaScript code registered on the Onload and OnSave events as follows:

- * OnLoad: A lookup column on each tab is used to retrieve data. The data is used to populate columns on that same tab.
- * OnSave: Data validation involves calculations of columns on the form. If a value is outside the acceptable range, the record must not be saved.

Users report that loading and saving the form takes too long when they create a new record.

You need to shorten the time it takes to load and save the form without losing functionality.

Which new event registrations should you create? To answer, select the appropriate options in the answer area.
