ASET Ethics Examination-ASET Professional Practice Exam (PPE) Sample Questions (Q16-Q21):

NEW QUESTION # 16

Which of the following is the first phase of an environmental site assessment?

- A. Examining the most probable locations of contamination by conducting tests

- B. Gathering information about the property from all of the parties involved
- C. Providing a detailed description of the contaminants
- D. Recommending a remediation process

Answer: B

Explanation:

In environmental engineering and technology, an Environmental Site Assessment (ESA) is conducted in strict, standardized phases to manage risk and costs effectively. A Phase 1 ESA is explicitly a non-intrusive, preliminary investigation. Its sole purpose is to determine the likelihood that environmental contamination exists on a property. The correct action during this first phase is gathering information about the property. This involves conducting historical research (reviewing old maps, land titles, and aerial photographs), conducting site walk-throughs to look for visual evidence (like stained soil or abandoned barrels), and interviewing past and present owners or neighbors. Phase 1 does not involve physically testing the soil or water (Option D); physical sampling and detailed descriptions of contaminants happen in a Phase 2 ESA. Recommending and executing a cleanup or remediation process (Option A) is the function of a Phase 3 ESA.

NEW QUESTION # 17

Which of the following statements about Continuing Professional Development (CPD) programs is true?

- A. Associations should have a voluntary program of CPD activities.
- B. Associations should conduct a practice review of a large sample of members.
- C. There is no need to report and record CPD activities.
- D. Associations should have a mandatory program of CPD activities.

Answer: D

Explanation:

The fundamental justification for the existence of professional regulatory bodies like ASET is the protection of the public. Because technology, codes, safety standards, and engineering practices evolve at a rapid pace, a professional's knowledge can quickly become obsolete. An obsolete professional is an incompetent professional, and an incompetent professional poses a severe risk to public safety.

Therefore, a purely "voluntary" CPD program (Option B) is insufficient, as it allows complacent individuals to fall behind. To fulfill their statutory mandate, professional associations must implement a mandatory program of CPD activities (Option C). This requirement ensures that every single regulated member actively maintains, upgrades, and broadens their technical and ethical competency throughout their entire career. Compliance must be tracked, reported, and audited (contradicting Option A) to ensure that the public can continually trust the protected designations (like C.Tech. and C.E.T.) to represent current, safe, and effective professional practice.

NEW QUESTION # 18

A regulated member of ASET is ill and is taking extended sick leave from work. The member is not able to complete any continuing professional development (CPD) activities due to the nature of the illness, but is planning to return to work as soon as possible. Which of the following actions should the member take?

- A. Contact ASET to request an exemption to the CPD requirement for the duration of the illness.
- B. Find a way to complete the mandatory CPD activities regardless of the illness.
- C. No action is required on the part of the member.
- D. Resign membership with ASET as it is not possible to complete the CPD requirement.

Answer: A

Explanation:

Continuing Professional Development (CPD) is a mandatory requirement for regulated members of ASET to ensure they maintain their competency, keep their skills current, and continue to protect the public throughout their careers. However, ASET recognizes that unexpected life events, such as severe illness, parental leave, or periods of prolonged unemployment, can legitimately prevent a member from meeting their annual CPD obligations. In situations involving extended medical leave, it is inappropriate and potentially harmful to the member's well-being to force compliance, nor is it necessary for them to resign their hard-earned professional membership. Instead, the correct professional protocol, as outlined in ASET's practice guidelines, is for the member to proactively contact ASET to request a formal exemption or reduction in their CPD requirements for the duration of their absence from active practice. By officially communicating with the regulatory body, the member maintains their good standing while responsibly managing their professional obligations during a period of personal hardship, ensuring total compliance with the administrative rules of the association.

NEW QUESTION # 19

Who has the authority to enact legislation?

- A. Municipal government
- B. Federal government
- C. Provincial government
- D. B and C above

Answer: D

Explanation:

In Canada's legal and political system, the authority to enact "legislation" (formal statutes or Acts) is strictly divided by the Canadian Constitution (specifically the Constitution Act, 1867) between two levels of government: the Federal government and the Provincial governments. The Federal government enacts legislation pertaining to matters of national interest (e.g., criminal law, telecommunications, national defense, copyright). The Provincial governments enact legislation pertaining to matters of regional interest (e.g., property and civil rights, healthcare, education, and the regulation of professions like engineering through Acts such as the EGPA). Municipal governments (cities, towns) do not have the constitutional authority to enact legislation. Instead, they are entirely "creatures of the province" and only possess delegated authority to pass "bylaws" (e.g., zoning rules, parking regulations, local building permits) under the strict boundaries set by provincial statutes.

Therefore, only the provincial and federal levels of government possess the true constitutional power to enact legislation.

NEW QUESTION # 20

A regulated member of ASET is asked by a client to review the designs of a member from another organization in secret. The work under review does not have any implications for public safety or involve any proprietary matters, such as trade secrets. Which of the following actions should the member take in this situation?

- A. Report the client to ASET.
- B. Report the client to the employer.
- C. Refuse to review the member's work.
- D. Review and comment on the member's work.

Answer: C

Explanation:

Reviewing the work of another professional is a common practice (e.g., peer reviews, quality assurance, or taking over a project), but it is heavily governed by professional courtesy and ethical guidelines.

According to standard professional ethics in engineering and technology across Canada, a practitioner must not review the work of another practitioner for the same client in secret. If a professional is hired to review someone else's work, ethical courtesy dictates that they must notify the original author that their work is being reviewed, unless doing so would facilitate a cover-up of a critical safety hazard or violate strict corporate trade secrets. Because this scenario explicitly states there are no public safety implications or trade secrets involved, the demand for "secrecy" is merely a client preference that violates professional collegiality. The member should refuse to conduct the review in secret, advising the client that ethical standards require notifying the original author before proceeding with the review.
