Details of the Official Training Course

The official training called “MGT512: Security Leadership Essentials for Managers” is delivered by the GIAC’s partner SANS. In general, the course reinforces the knowledge of essential exam concepts by empowering the candidates to become more than just security experts. It is meant to help one develop a good grasp of all the required concepts, specifically, information security skills, with a primary focus on vulnerability management, data protection, application security, and DevSecOps among other objectives. This program is written and administered by Frank Kim and can be taken in as many as three forms including the live online delivery mode, OnDemand, and in-person training options.

That being said, the MGT512: Security Leadership Essentials for Managers course will provide both management skills and technical mastery that’s needed to distinguish yourself among your peers and become the go-to IT professional for any role that includes planning and handling security initiatives and projects. It is obvious that becoming a security manager requires much more than just an understanding of the basic exam topics. And that’s what this course aims to help you achieve. By completing it, you will acquire solid competence and hands-on abilities associated with information security concepts and become an important team player who can make things happen.

Once you go through all the key knowledge areas, you will easily demonstrate your ability to manage the general security Lifecycle. This is achieved by a comprehensive program of the course and different types of activities involved in it. Thus, candidates will not just study theory on their own but also participate in group discussions, in-class games, work with simulations, do team-based exercises, and try to solve case scenarios. This ensures that learners have grasped just everything there’s to know about this path.
