- A. ZTP
- B. CoS
- C. IGMP
- D. QoS

Answer: D

NEW QUESTION # 31

A Solutions Architect is designing a highly available core layer for a campus network using two HPE Aruba Networking CX 8325 switches. The primary goals are to provide a single, unified management point, eliminate Spanning Tree Protocol (STP) for core links, and ensure seamless failover for downstream access layer switches and connected devices. The architect has chosen to implement Virtual Switching Framework (VSF) to stack the two core switches. What is the primary benefit of using VSF in this design compared to traditional redundancy protocols like STP?

- A. It allows both switches in the stack to actively forward traffic simultaneously, effectively doubling the core bandwidth.
- B. It simplifies IP address management by assigning a separate IP address to each switch in the stack.
- C. It provides faster convergence than STP by using Layer 3 OSPF for loop prevention.
- D. It increases the number of available physical ports by combining the ports of both switches.

Answer: A

How many collision domains are shown in the diagram below?

□

- A. 0
- B. 1
- C. 2
- D. 3

- B. ICMP
- C. UDP
- D. IP

Answer: A,C

Both TCP (Transmission Control Protocol) and UDP (User Datagram Protocol) operate at the Transport Layer (Layer 4) of the OSI model. These protocols are responsible for managing the end-to-end communication and flow of data between devices on a network.

A). TCP (Transmission Control Protocol): TCP is a connection-oriented protocol that provides reliable, ordered, and error-checked delivery of data between applications. It ensures that data packets are delivered correctly and in the correct order.

B). UDP (User Datagram Protocol): UDP is a connectionless protocol that does not guarantee reliable delivery or ordering of data packets. It is used in applications where speed is more important than reliability, such as streaming media or online gaming.
