The Beryl Institute Certified Patient Experience Professional Sample Questions (Q144-Q149):

NEW QUESTION # 144

Which is the BEST way to de-escalate a situation in which a patient is acting in an agitated, aggressive manner?

- A. Keep hands in pockets.
- B. Use short, simple sentences.
- C. Stand close to the patient.
- D. Maintain a smile.

Answer: B

Explanation:

This question aligns with Partnership and Advocacy , particularly communication and safety in high-stress interactions. Option C is correct because using short, simple sentences helps reduce confusion, lowers emotional intensity, and promotes clarity during escalation. CPXP principles emphasize that in tense situations, communication should be calm, clear, and direct to help the patient regain a sense of control.

Option A (smiling) may be perceived as dismissive or inappropriate in serious situations. Option B (standing close) can escalate aggression by invading personal space, and Option D (hands in pockets) may appear disengaged or unsafe. Effective de- escalation requires maintaining a calm tone, appropriate distance, and clear communication to ensure both patient and staff safety while preserving dignity and respect.

NEW QUESTION # 145

According to consumers, what is the MOST important component of the healthcare experience?

- A. " Listen to me. "
- B. " Show me empathy. "
- C. " Educate me on my condition. "
- D. " Provide me with information. "

Answer: A

Explanation:

This question falls under Partnership and Advocacy , which centers on incorporating the patient's voice into care delivery. According to widely recognized patient experience research reflected in CPXP principles, the most important component identified by consumers is being listened to . Option A (" Listen to me ") is correct because active listening is foundational to trust, understanding and effective communication. When patients feel heard, it validates their concerns, improves emotional connection, and enhances engagement in care decisions. While empathy (D), education (C), and information sharing (B) are all critical components, they are most effective only after truly understanding the patient's perspective. CPXP emphasizes that listening is the starting point for all patient-centered interactions, enabling personalized care, reducing misunderstandings, and improving both satisfaction and clinical outcomes.

NEW QUESTION # 146

Which information has the GREATEST impact on staff regarding the need and impact for changes to improve the care experience for patients and families?

- A. Targeted performance metrics coupled with patient and/or staff stories
- B. Trended data over time
- C. Control charts with annotations
- D. Run charts targeting specific improvement efforts

Answer: A

Explanation:

This question falls under Measurement and Analysis , particularly how data is communicated to drive engagement and improvement. While quantitative data such as trends (A), control charts (B), and run charts (C) are important for tracking performance, Option D has the greatest impact because it combines data with human stories . CPXP principles emphasize that storytelling, when paired with targeted performance metrics, creates an emotional connection that makes the data meaningful and actionable for staff. Patient and staff stories help illustrate the real-world impact behind the numbers, increasing empathy, urgency, and motivation to improve. Data alone may inform, but stories inspire action. This combination is most effective in influencing behavior change, reinforcing purpose, and driving sustained improvements in the patient and family experience.

NEW QUESTION # 147

Which approach BEST demonstrates meaningful partnership with patients and families in organizational improvement?

- A. Using only complaint data as the organization's patient voice
- B. Asking patients to react to a completed solution after leadership has already approved it
- C. Including patient and family advisors as ongoing members of improvement and design work from planning through evaluation
- D. Limiting patient participation to annual recognition events

Answer: C

Explanation:

This question aligns with Partnership and Advocacy because CPXP expects professionals to move beyond token involvement and build authentic partnership with patients, care partners, and families. The CPXP framework emphasizes partnering with patients, care partners, staff, and community members to drive continuous improvement and engaging a diverse range of voices. AHRQ also describes working with patients and families as advisors at the organizational level as a critical part of patient and family engagement, including their involvement in planning, delivery, and evaluation. The Beryl Institute further notes that formal Patient and Family Advisor programs and co-design efforts add depth and perspective beyond survey results. For that reason, B is best. Options A, C, and D are too limited, reactive, or symbolic to represent true partnership.

NEW QUESTION # 148

Which is the MOST effective use of real-time data collection?

- A. Providing opportunity for immediate recognition
- B. Identifying patterns and trends for organizational change
- C. Shaping organizational strategy
- D. Revealing needed facility-wide improvements

Answer: A
