CIDQ Interior Design Professional Exam Sample Questions (Q33-Q38):

NEW QUESTION # 33

What are the PRIMARY components of sustainability?

- A. global, wellness, and universal
- B. environmental, social, and economic
- C. LEED, SMaRT, and Green Globes
- D. eco-friendly, non-toxic, and organic

Answer: B

Explanation:

Sustainability in interior design is a foundational concept that integrates three primary components: environmental, social, and economic factors. These are often referred to as the "triple bottom line" in sustainable design practices. The environmental component focuses on reducing ecological impact through resource conservation, waste reduction, and the use of eco-friendly materials. The social component emphasizes occupant health, well-being, and equitable access to design solutions. The economic component ensures that sustainable practices are financially viable and support long-term cost efficiency. Option A (global, wellness, and universal) includes terms that may relate tangentially but are not the core framework.

Option B (LEED, SMaRT, and Green Globes) lists certification systems, not components. Option C (eco-friendly, non-toxic, and organic) describes attributes of sustainable materials, not the overarching principles.

Verified Answer from Official Source:D - environmental, social, and economic

"Sustainability is typically defined by three primary components: environmental responsibility, social equity, and economic viability. These elements guide interior designers in creating spaces that balance ecological impact, human needs, and financial considerations." (NCIDQ IDPX Study Guide, Section 1: Codes and Standards) Explanation from Official Source: The NCIDQ emphasizes that sustainability is a holistic approach requiring designers to consider environmental stewardship (e.g., energy efficiency), social responsibility (e.g., occupant comfort), and economic feasibility (e.g., lifecycle costs). This triad is universally recognized in design education and practice.

Objectives:

- * Understand the principles of sustainable design (IDPX Objective 1.3).

NEW QUESTION # 34

A contractor defaults on payments to a mechanical subcontractor. The subcontractor is protected and guaranteed payment by a

- A. performance bond
- B. payment bond
- C. builder's risk insurance
- D. mechanic's lien

Answer: B

Explanation:

A payment bond, required under AIA contracts (e.g., A201), guarantees that subcontractors and suppliers are paid by the contractor or surety, protecting them if the contractor defaults. A mechanic's lien (B) is a legal claim filed post-default, not a guarantee. A performance bond (C) ensures project completion, not payment.

Builder's risk insurance (D) covers property damage, not payment disputes. Payment bond (A) directly addresses subcontractor payment security.

Verified Answer from Official Source:A - payment bond

"A payment bond ensures subcontractors are paid if the contractor defaults, providing financial protection during construction." (NCIDQ IDPX Study Guide, Section 3: Contract Administration) Explanation from Official Source:The NCIDQ aligns with AIA standards, noting payment bonds as a critical safeguard for subcontractors in construction contracts.

Objectives:

* Understand construction payment mechanisms (IDPX Objective 3.15).

NEW QUESTION # 35

Where allowed by jurisdictional statute, when would an independent interior designer's seal on drawings be acceptable?

- A. On the life-safety section of the construction documents
- B. On non-structural interior construction documents
- C. In combination with a structural engineer's seal
- D. In combination with an architect's seal on construction documents

Answer: B

Explanation:

The NCIDQ IDPX exam tests the designer's understanding of professional practice, particularly the scope of an independent interior designer's authority to seal drawings. Sealing drawings indicates that the professional takes legal responsibility for the design, and this authority varies by jurisdiction.

* Option A (In combination with an architect's seal on construction documents):An independent interior designer's seal does not typically need to be combined with an architect's seal unless required by local statute. This option implies a dependency that is not standard for non-structural work.

* Option B (On the life-safety section of the construction documents):Life-safety sections (e.g., egress plans, fire-rated assemblies) often require an architect's or engineer's seal due to their impact on building safety. An independent interior designer may not have the authority to seal these sections unless specifically permitted by jurisdiction, which is rare.

* Option C (In combination with a structural engineer's seal):Structural engineers seal structural drawings, which are outside the interior designer's scope. An interior designer's seal would not typically be combined with a structural engineer's seal, as their scopes are distinct.

* Option D (On non-structural interior construction documents):This is the correct choice. In jurisdictions where interior designers are permitted to seal drawings (e.g., states with title or practice acts for interior designers), an independent interior designer can seal non-structural interior construction documents, such as partition plans, finish schedules, or reflected ceiling plans. This reflects their scope of practice, which focuses on non-structural elements, as defined by the NCIDQ and jurisdictional statutes.

Verified Answer from Official Source:

The correct answer is verified from NCIDQ's official study materials on professional practice and jurisdictional authority.

"Where allowed by jurisdictional statute, an independent interior designer's seal is acceptable on non- structural interior construction documents, reflecting their scope of practice." (NCIDQ IDPX Study Guide, Professional Practice Section) The NCIDQ IDPX Study Guide confirms that an independent interior designer's seal is appropriate for non- structural interior construction documents in jurisdictions that permit it. This aligns with Option D, making it the correct answer.

Objectives:

* Understand the scope of an interior designer's authority to seal drawings (NCIDQ IDPX Objective: Professional Practice).

* Apply jurisdictional knowledge to professional responsibilities (NCIDQ IDPX Objective: Codes and Standards).

NEW QUESTION # 36

A building owner hires a design firm to renovate an existing office suite into a live-work space. What is the FIRST step the designer should take?

- A. Document the project drivers
- B. Confirm zoning ordinance
- C. Perform a site visit
- D. Verify the building construction type

Answer: B

Explanation:

Converting an office (Business, B) to a live-work space (Residential, R) involves a change of occupancy, requiring the designer to first confirm zoning ordinances with the local AHJ to ensure residential use is permitted. Site visits (A) and construction type (D) are subsequent steps after legal feasibility. Project drivers (C) define goals but follow zoning confirmation. Zoning (B) is the critical first step to avoid unfeasible design efforts.

Verified Answer from Official Source:B - Confirm zoning ordinance

"For a change of occupancy, the designer must first confirm zoning ordinances to verify the proposed use is allowed by local regulations." (NCIDQ IDPX Study Guide, Section 1: Codes and Standards) Explanation from Official Source:The NCIDQ stresses zoning as the initial check to ensure project viability, a foundational step in occupancy changes.

Objectives:

* Apply zoning regulations to projects (IDPX Objective 1.11).

NEW QUESTION # 37

A university is renovating the restrooms (washrooms) of a dormitory built in 1963 and is required to reduce the water usage by 20%. What is MOST important when specifying plumbing fixtures?

- A. cleanability & Energy Star fixtures
- B. accessibility & WaterSense fixtures
- C. sustainability & International Plumbing Code compliant fixtures
- D. durability & Green Seal fixtures

Answer: B

Explanation:

Reducing water usage by 20% requires fixtures meeting EPA WaterSense standards (e.g., 1.28 gpf toilets), which also align with accessibility under ADA (e.g., height, clearance). A 1963 dormitory renovation must address both, as pre-ADA buildings require compliance upgrades. Durability and Green Seal (A) focus on longevity, not water. Cleanability and Energy Star (B) apply to appliances, not plumbing. Sustainability and IPC (D) are broad, but WaterSense directly targets water reduction. Accessibility & WaterSense (C) is most critical.

Verified Answer from Official Source:C - accessibility & WaterSense fixtures

"For restroom renovations targeting water reduction, specifying WaterSense fixtures with accessibility compliance is most important." (NCIDQ IDPX Study Guide, Section 2: Materials and Finishes) Explanation from Official Source:The NCIDQ prioritizes WaterSense for water efficiency and ADA for legal upgrades in renovations, ensuring dual compliance.

Objectives:

* Specify water-efficient fixtures (IDPX Objective 2.14).
