The Open Group TOGAF Business Architecture Foundation Exam Sample Questions (Q63-Q68):

NEW QUESTION # 63
Which of the following can be used to help define information concepts in an information map?

- A. Value streams
- B. Statement of business goals and drivers
- C. Organization Map
- D. Stakeholder Map

Answer: B

Explanation:
A statement of business goals and drivers can be used to help define information concepts in an information map. This statement provides the context and rationale for the information requirements of the enterprise, which can then be reflected in the information map, ensuring that the information architecture supports the business objectives.

NEW QUESTION # 64
Which of the following best describes where business scenarios are used in the TOGAF ADM?

- A. They are used as part of the lessons learned activity at the end of Phase F.
- B. They are used in the Preliminary Phase, Phase A, and Phase B.
- C. They are used to resolve impacts across the Architecture Landscape in Phases B, C, and D.
- D. They are used as part of a business transformation readiness assessment in Phase E.

Answer: B

Explanation:
According to the TOGAF Standard, business scenarios are an important technique that may be used at various stages of the enterprise architecture, principally the Architecture Vision and the Business Architecture, but in other architecture domains as well, if required, to derive the characteristics of the architecture directly from the high-level requirements of the business1. The Architecture

Vision is developed in Phase A, and the Business Architecture is developed in Phase B. The Preliminary Phase is also a stage where business scenarios can be used to help identify and understand business needs2.

NEW QUESTION # 65
Which of the following describes the concept of an Enterprise Architecture Capability?

- A. The ability to strike a balance between positive and negative outcomes resulting from the realization of opportunities.
- B. The ability to distinguish between different types of architectural assets that exist at different levels of abstraction in the enterprise.
- C. The ability to follow general rules and guidelines that relate to Enterprise Architecture work and that enable decision-making.
- D. The ability to develop, use and sustain the architecture of a particular enterprise using architecture to govern change.

Answer: D

NEW QUESTION # 66
Complete the sentence. The four dimensions used to scope an architecture are:

- A. Strategy, Segment, Capability, Budget
- B. Business, Data, Application, Technology
- C. Breadth, Depth, Time Period, Architecture Domains
- D. Strategy, Portfolio, Project, Solution Delivery

Answer: C

Explanation:
In TOGAF, the dimensions for scoping an architecture are Breadth (coverage across the organization), Depth (level of detail), Time Period (horizon of the architecture), and Architecture Domains (the four architecture domains of Business, Data, Application, and Technology). These dimensions ensure comprehensive scoping and contextual alignment.
References: TOGAF Standard, Chapter on Scoping the Architecture.
According to TOGAF, defining the scope of an architecture involves considering these four key dimensions:
Breadth: This refers to how much of the enterprise is covered by the architecture. It defines the boundaries of the architecture, which could range from a single department to the entire organization, or even extending to external partners.
Depth: This dimension determines the level of detail included in the architecture. It can range from high-level conceptual models to detailed specifications of individual components.
Time Period: This specifies the timeframe for the architecture, including the intended lifespan of the architecture and any planned phases or iterations. It addresses questions like "What is the architecture for now?" and "What should the architecture look like in the future?" Architecture Domains: This dimension defines which of the four architecture domains (Business, Data, Application, Technology) are included in the scope. The selection of domains depends on the specific needs and objectives of the architecture development effort.

NEW QUESTION # 67
What Business Architecture concept is most related to an information Map?

- A. Value Stream Map
- B. Business Capability Map
- C. Heat Map
- D. Organization Map

Answer: B

Explanation:
An information map is most closely related to a Business Capability Map in the sense that both are tools used to visualize and understand different aspects of an enterprise's architecture. While an information map focuses on the relationships and flow of information within the organization, a Business Capability Map outlines the abilities and capacities the business possesses. Both are used to analyze and design architectures that support the business's objectives.
