IIA Practice of Internal Auditing Sample Questions (Q409-Q414):

NEW QUESTION # 409

Which of the following is an effective approach for internal auditors to take to improve collaboration with audit clients during an engagement?

1. Obtain control concerns from the client before the audit begins so the internal auditor can tailor the scope accordingly.
2. Discuss the engagement plan with the client so the client can understand the reasoning behind the approach.
3. Review test criteria and procedures where the client expresses concerns about the type of tests to be conducted.
4. Provide all observations at the end of the audit to ensure the client is in agreement with the facts before publishing the report.

- A. 2 and 3 only
- B. 1 and 2 only
- C. 1 and 4 only
- D. 3 and 4 only

Answer: B

NEW QUESTION # 410

Some time after the final audit report was issued, the engagement supervisor learned that several internal control deficiencies were not remedied, despite management's previous agreement to remedy them. According to IIA guidance, which of the following is the most appropriate response?

- A. The engagement supervisor should rely on his negotiation skills and issue an ultimatum to management to remedy the control deficiencies
- B. Ensure that these deficiencies are captured in the documentation as high-priority areas to be reviewed during the next audit.
- C. The engagement supervisor must notify the chief audit executive (CAE) that the deficiencies have not been rectified
- D. The engagement supervisor should rely on professional judgment as to whether the CAE should be informed, or the management action plan should be adjusted

Answer: C

Explanation:

According to the International Standards for the Professional Practice of Internal Auditing, the CAE must be kept informed of significant issues and deficiencies that are not addressed by management. Standard 2600 - Communicating the Acceptance of Risks requires the CAE to report any situation where management has accepted a level of risk that may be unacceptable to the organization. If the engagement supervisor learns that agreed-upon remedial actions have not been implemented, the CAE needs to be notified to determine further steps, ensuring that risks are managed appropriately and in alignment with the organization's risk tolerance.

This response aligns with the internal audit function's responsibility to follow up on management's corrective actions. References: The IIA's International Standards for the Professional Practice of Internal Auditing, Standard 2600 - Communicating the Acceptance of Risks.

NEW QUESTION # 411

In preparing to facilitate a control self-assessment session, an auditor would be least likely to ensure that:

- A. An independent content expert is available to help settle disagreements.
- B. Management is consulted on the issues and priorities.
- C. Key stakeholders are represented in the group.
- D. Background research is completed to familiarize the auditor with relevant issues.

Answer: A

NEW QUESTION # 412

How should an internal auditor approach preparing a detailed risk assessment during engagement planning?

- A. Work with management of the function being reviewed, as management would be most familiar with the business objectives and related risks.
- B. Work with external auditors to ensure that the risk assessment includes items reflected on the independent auditor's report.
- C. Consult with the compliance department, which typically has a more comprehensive view of the organization.
- D. Complete the risk assessment independently to prevent conflicts of interest with the function being reviewed.

Answer: A

Explanation:

When preparing a detailed risk assessment during engagement planning, the internal auditor should collaborate with the management of the function being reviewed. Management has the most in-depth knowledge of their business objectives, processes, and the associated risks. This cooperation ensures that the risk assessment is comprehensive, accurate, and relevant to the specific context of the function under review. It also helps in identifying any potential areas of concern that might not be evident to external parties.

NEW QUESTION # 413

An internal auditor has been assigned to facilitate a risk and control self-assessment for the finance group. Which of the following is the most appropriate role that she should assume when facilitating the workshop?

- A. Screen and vet participants so that the most appropriate candidates are selected to participate in the exercise.
- B. Evaluate and report on all issues that may be uncovered during the exercise.
- C. Provide appropriate techniques and guidelines on how the exercise should be undertaken.
- D. Express an opinion on the participants' inputs and conclusions as the assessment progresses.

Answer: C

Explanation:

When facilitating a risk and control self-assessment (RCSA) workshop, the internal auditor's most appropriate role is to provide the necessary techniques and guidelines for conducting the exercise. This involves guiding participants on the methodology and framework for identifying and assessing risks and controls without influencing their inputs or conclusions, thereby ensuring an objective and effective self-assessment process.
