NEW QUESTION # 38
An architect recently discovered new opportunities the cloud can provide to the company. A business analyst is currently working with the architect to document the business use-case scenarios. Which of the following should be the architect's NEXT step?

- A. Conduct a feasibility study.
- B. Initialize a PoC.

NEW QUESTION # 39
Which of the following is a limitation of the SaaS cloud model?

- A. Users do not have full control over the software version and roadmap of the cloud solution.
- B. It does not support integration with pre-existing identity engines.
- C. Users cannot choose the global location where their data will be stored
- D. It does not scale to allow additional users.

Answer: A

Explanation:
One of the limitations of the SaaS cloud model is that users do not have full control over the software version and roadmap of the cloud solution. This means that users have to rely on the vendor to provide updates, patches, bug fixes, and new features for the software, and they may not be able to choose when or how to implement them. Users may also face compatibility issues with other applications or services if the vendor changes the software without prior notice or consultation. Users may also have limited or no access to the underlying code or configuration of the software, which may restrict their ability to customize or optimize the software for their specific needs. NEW QUESTION # 40
Which of the following activities in a cloud environment requires a defined scope and formal authorization from the CSP?

- A. Penetration testing
- B. Orchestration
- C. Vulnerability scanning
- D. Sandboxing

Answer: A

Explanation:
Penetration testing, also known as ethical hacking, is a security assessment methodology that involves simulating a cyberattack on a cloud-based system or service to identify and exploit vulnerabilities and weaknesses. Penetration testing can help to evaluate the security posture of a cloud environment and provide recommendations for improvement12 Penetration testing in a cloud environment requires a defined scope and formal authorization from the cloud service provider (CSP), because it can have significant impacts on the cloud infrastructure, applications, and data. Penetration testing can potentially cause damage, disruption, or breach of the cloud resources, as well as violate the terms of service or the service level agreements of the CSP. Therefore, before conducting penetration testing in a cloud environment, the customer must obtain the consent and approval of the CSP, and follow the guidelines and policies of the CSP regarding the scope, duration, frequency, and methods of the testing3 Orchestration, sandboxing, and vulnerability scanning are not activities that require a defined scope and formal authorization from the CSP, because they are less intrusive and disruptive than penetration testing. Orchestration is the process of automating and coordinating the deployment and management of cloud resources using tools and scripts. Sandboxing is the process of creating and isolating a testing environment within the cloud to experiment with new features or applications without affecting the production environment. Vulnerability scanning is the process of detecting and reporting the known vulnerabilities and misconfigurations in the cloud resources using automated tools. These activities can help to improve the efficiency, flexibility, and security of the cloud environment, but they do not involve actively exploiting or compromising the cloud resources. Therefore, they do not require the same level of permission and oversight from the CSP as penetration testing.
