ITIL 4 Managing Professional Transition Sample Questions (Q89-Q94):

NEW QUESTION # 89

Which guiding principle would help the MOST in breaking down silos and eliminating conflicting goals?

- A. Progress iteratively with feedback
- B. Collaborate and promote visibility
- C. Optimize and automate
- D. Start where you are

Answer: B

Explanation:

Explanation

Collaborate and promote visibility is the guiding principle that would help the most in breaking down silos and eliminating conflicting goals. This principle encourages working together across boundaries and sharing information and knowledge with relevant stakeholders. By doing so, the organization can achieve a common understanding of the vision, objectives, and progress of the service value system. This also helps to avoid duplication of work, reduce errors, and improve efficiency and effectiveness.

Collaborate and promote visibility also fosters a culture of trust, openness, and learning, which are essential for continual improvement and innovation. References:

NEW QUESTION # 90

Which two stakeholders co-create value in the service relationship?

- A. The investor and supplier
- B. The provider and supplier
- C. The consumer and provider
- D. The investor and consumer

Answer: C

Explanation:

Explanation

According to ITIL 4, value is co-created by two stakeholders in the service relationship: the consumer and the provider. The consumer is the person or organization that defines the requirements for a service and takes responsibility for the outcomes of service consumption. The provider is the person or organization that provides services to consumers. Value is co-created when the consumer and the provider collaborate and communicate to ensure that the service meets the consumer's needs, expectations, and outcomes. Value is not delivered by the provider alone, but rather emerges from the interactions between the provider and the consumer. The other options are not correct, as they do not involve the consumer and the provider. The supplier is a person or organization that provides goods or services to the provider, but does not directly co-create value with the consumer. The investor is a person or organization that provides funding or resources for the provider, but does not directly co-create value with the consumer. References:

NEW QUESTION # 91

An organization's customers have historically been satisfied with the functionality and performance of its service. Recently, however, the organization is getting complaints about both the performance of the services and areas such as sales and customer support. How BEST can the organization collect the information needed to address these complaints?

- A. Use feedback from service reviews to assess value realization
- B. Collect customer experience and service level metrics
- C. Gather customer service performance metrics and map to SLAs
- D. Conduct satisfaction surveys after service interactions

Answer: B

NEW QUESTION # 92

What do Lean and Agile consider a barrier to high performance?

- A. Pulling versus pushing work
- B. Making work visible
- C. Large batch sizes of work
- D. Limiting work-in-progress

Answer: C

Explanation:

Explanation

Large batch sizes of work are considered a barrier to high performance in Lean and Agile because they increase the amount of work in progress (WIP), which leads to longer cycle times, higher variability, lower quality, and reduced feedback and learning. Large batches also increase the risk of waste, rework, and delays, as well as the complexity and uncertainty of the work. Lean and Agile advocate for reducing batch sizes and limiting WIP, which enables faster flow, shorter feedback loops, higher quality, and more value delivery.

Some of the practices that help reduce batch sizes and limit WIP are:

Pulling versus pushing work, which means that work is initiated only when there is a demand and capacity for it, rather than being assigned or scheduled in advance.

Making work visible, which means that the status and progress of work are transparent and accessible to all stakeholders, using tools such as Kanban boards, burn-down charts, and dashboards.

Limiting work-in-progress, which means that the number of work items in each stage of the workflow is restricted, based on the available resources and throughput, to prevent bottlenecks and overloading.
