最新的 Salesforce Developers PDII 免費考試真題 (Q32-Q37):

問題 #32

A company has many different unit test methods that create Account records as part of their data setup. A new required field was added to the Account and now all of the unit tests fail.

What is the optimal way for a developer to fix the issue?

- A. Create a TestDataFactory class that serves as the single place to create Accounts for unit tests and set the required field there.
- B. Add a before insert trigger on Account to set the value of the required field.
- C. Change the required field to be a validation rule that excludes the System Administrator profile.
- D. Add the required field to the data setup for all of the unit tests.

答案： A

解題說明：

The optimal way to fix the failing unit tests after adding a new required field to the Account object is to create a TestDataFactory class that serves as a centralized place to create Accounts for unit tests. This class would include the new required field, ensuring that all unit tests have the necessary data setup. References: Apex Developer Guide - Using a Test Data Factory

問題 #33

Universal Containers needs to integrate with their own, existing, internal custom web application. The web application accepts JSON payloads, resizes product images, and sends the resized images back to Salesforce.

What should the developer use to implement this integration?

- A. A flow with an outbound message that contains a session ID1314
- B. An Apex trigger that calls an @future method that allows callouts910
- C. A platform event that makes a callout to the web application1516
- D. A flow that calls an @future method that allows callouts1112

答案： B

解題說明：

Comprehensive and Detailed 150 to 250 words of Explanation:20

This integration requirement involves two specific needs: sending a custom JSON payload and handling a response that involves updating data in Salesforce. Outbound Messaging (Option C) is a declarative tool, but it is limited to XML/SOAP protocols and cannot send JSON. Therefore, a custom programmatic solution using Apex is required to construct and send the JSON payload to the external REST service.

Since the integration must be triggered by an event in Salesforce (likely the upload or update of a product record), an Apex trigger is the most direct starting point. However, as noted in previous questions, callouts cannot be performed directly within a trigger's execution context because they would block the database transaction. The developer must use asynchronous processing to handle the callout. An @future(callout=true) method is the standard way to achieve this. The trigger captures the necessary data, passes it to the future method, and the future method then performs the HTTP request to the external application.

Once the external application resizes the image, it can use the Salesforce REST API to send the resized file back to Salesforce.

While Platform Events (Option D) are a modern alternative for event-driven architectures, they would still require an asynchronous subscriber (like a trigger or a flow) to actually perform the callout, making the Trigger + Future method combination the most straightforward and traditional answer for this PDII scenario.

問題 #34

There are user complaints about slow render times of a custom data table within a visualforce page that loads thousands of Account records at once.

What can a developer do to help alleviate such issues?

- A. Upload a third-party data table library as a static resource.
- B. Use the standard Account List controller and implement pagination.
- C. Use JavaScript remoting to query the accounts.

- D. Use the transient keyword in the Apex code when querying the Account records.

答案： D

問題 #35

How should a developer assert that a trigger with an asynchronous process has successfully run?

- A. Insert records into Salesforce, use seeAllData=true, then perform assertions.
- B. Create all test data, use future in the rest class, then perform assertions.
- C. Create all test data in the test class, use system.runs {} to invoke the trigger, then perform assertions.
- D. Create all test data in the test class, invoke Test.startTest {} and Test.stopTest {} and then perform assertions.

答案： C

問題 #36

A developer has a Visualforce page that automatically assigns ownership of an Account to a queue upon save. The page appears to correctly assign ownership, but an assertion validating the correct ownership fails.

What can cause this problem?

- A. The test class does not use the seeAllData=true= annotation.
- B. The test class does not use the Bulk API for loading test data.
- C. The test class does not implement the Queueable interface.
- D. The test class does not retrieve the updated value from the database,

答案： D
