What is the default purpose of a Splunk Deployment Server?

- A. To stage and deploy updates to /etc/deployment-apps/
- B. To stage and deploy updates to /etc/manager-apps/
- C. To stage and deploy updates to $SPLUNK_HOME/etc/apps/
- D. To stage and deploy updates to /etc/pccr-apps/

Answer: A

Explanation:

The Splunk Deployment Server is a centralized component used to distribute configurations and apps to multiple deployment clients, such as forwarders, indexers, or other Splunk instances.

By default, all deployment apps that the Deployment Server manages are stored in the directory:

`$SPLUNK_HOME/etc/deployment-apps/`

Each subdirectory under this path represents a deployment app that can be pushed to one or more clients based on rules defined in `serverclass.conf`.

The Deployment Server stages updates in `/etc/deployment-apps/` and deploys them to clients based on matching server classes. This mechanism allows centralized management and configuration consistency across distributed Splunk environments.

Reference (Splunk Documentation):
