ISTQB Certified Tester Foundation Level (CTFL v4.0) Sample Questions (Q354-Q359):

NEW QUESTION # 354

What is 'Component Testing'?

- A. Functional testing
- B. Experience-based testing

- C. Integration Testing
- D. A test level

Answer: D

Explanation:

Component testing is a test level. A test level is a group of test activities that are organized and managed together based on some common characteristics or objectives. A test level can be defined based on various factors, such as the scope and target of testing, the phase and model of development, the stakeholders and roles involved in testing, etc. Component testing (also known as unit testing or module testing) is a test level that focuses on verifying the functionality and quality of individual software components (such as modules, classes, functions, methods, etc.). Component testing can be performed by developers or testers using various techniques and tools depending on the type and complexity of the components. The other options are not test levels. Integration testing is another test level that focuses on verifying the functionality and quality of groups of software components that interact with each other or with external systems. Functional testing is a type of black-box dynamic testing that verifies that the system under test performs its intended functions according to its requirements or specifications. Experience-based testing is a category of test design techniques that rely on the tester's knowledge and intuition to derive and select test cases based on their experience with similar systems, technologies, domains, risks, etc. Verified References: A Study Guide to the ISTQB Foundation Level 2018 Syllabus - Springer, page 19.

NEW QUESTION # 355

Software was found to take much more time than the stated requirement of less than one second to save a file.

Upon investigation it was found that there was an unnecessary check inside a loop which was slowing down the file-save operation. The software not being able to meet the desired response time is an example of

- A. Error
- B. Defect
- C. Failure
- D. It is not a defect

Answer: C

Explanation:

A failure is an event in which a component or system does not perform a required function within specified limits. A failure is observable by the software users or other stakeholders. A failure is caused by one or more defects in the software. In this case, the software not being able to meet the desired response time is an example of a failure, as it deviates from the stated requirement and affects the user experience. It is not a defect, which is a flaw in the software that causes the failure. It is not an error, which is a human action that produces an incorrect result. It is not a non-defect, as it clearly violates a specified requirement. Verified References: [A Study Guide to the ISTQB Foundation Level 2018 Syllabus - Springer], Chapter 1, page 4.

NEW QUESTION # 356

The acceptance criteria associated with a user story:

- A. are often documented following in rule-oriented format using the following template: "As a [role], I want [feature], so that I can [benefit]"
- B. can be written in different formats and represent an aspect of a user story referred to as confirmation' of the so called "3 C's"
- C. are often written in a rule-oriented format using the template referred to as "Given/When/Then"
- D. must be written in one of the two following formats: scenario-oriented or rule-oriented

Answer: B

Explanation:

The acceptance criteria associated with a user story are the conditions that must be met for the user story to be considered done and to deliver the expected value to the user. They are often written in different formats, such as rule-oriented, scenario-oriented, or table-oriented, depending on the nature and complexity of the user story. They represent an aspect of a user story referred to as confirmation, which is one of the so called "3 C's" of user stories. The other two aspects are card and conversation. Card refers to the concise and informal description of the user story, usually following the template: "As a [role], I want [feature], so that I can [benefit]". Conversation refers to the ongoing dialogue between the stakeholders and the team members to clarify and refine the user story and its acceptance criteria. Therefore, option C is the correct answer.

NEW QUESTION # 357

As the last stage of a test cycle of an embedded device, you are performing exploratory testing. You observed that some character (A, X and Z) sent via a serial port to the device do not get registered on the device whereas they should be. You suspect that this could be due to a wrong configuration of the "bit parity" parameter.

Which of the following items of an incident report would you be UNABLE to write down based on this information?

- A. Actual result
- B. Test case identifier
- C. Test setup details
- D. Expected result

Answer: B

Explanation:

An incident report is a document that records the details of an incident. An incident report typically contains the following items:

* Identifier: A unique identifier for the incident report

* Summary: A concise summary of the incident

* Description: A detailed description of the incident, including the steps to reproduce it, the expected and actual results, and any relevant screenshots or logs

* Severity: The degree of impact that the incident has on the system

* Priority: The level of urgency for resolving the incident

* Status: The current state of the incident, such as new, open, resolved, closed, etc.

* Resolution: The action taken to resolve the incident, such as fix, workaround, reject, etc. Based on the information given in the question, the tester would be able to write down all of these items except for the test case identifier. A test case identifier is a unique identifier for a test case that is used to link it to other test artifacts, such as test plans, test scripts, test results or incident reports.

However, since the tester is performing exploratory testing, there is no predefined test case that can be associated with the incident.

Exploratory testing is an approach to testing that emphasizes learning, test design and test execution at the same time. Exploratory testing relies on the tester's skills, creativity and intuition to explore the software under test and discover defects. Exploratory testing does not use formal test cases

* or scripts, but rather uses test charters or missions that guide the tester's actions and objectives. Verified References: A Study Guide to the ISTQB Foundation Level 2018 Syllabus - Springer, Chapter 3, page 32-33; Chapter 5, page 47-48.
