Adobe Commerce Developer Professional Sample Questions (Q12-Q17):

NEW QUESTION # 12

An Adobe Commerce developer is about to deploy a critical feature to their Adobe Commerce Cloud (Pro Plan) production. They want to create a snapshot in order to be able to rollback if there is an issue with the feature.

How would they create the snapshot?

- A. Use the Cloud CLI for Commerce dedicated command.
- B. Create a ticket to Adobe Commerce Cloud support.
- C. Use the dedicated button on Project Web Interface.

Answer: A

Explanation:

To create a snapshot before deploying changes in Adobe Commerce Cloud (Pro Plan), the recommended approach is to use the Cloud CLI, which provides a dedicated command for creating snapshots. This allows for quick rollback if any issues arise post-deployment.

* Creating a Snapshot with Cloud CLI:

* The Adobe Commerce Cloud CLI tool includes commands for managing snapshots, which capture the current state of code and data, ensuring you have a restore point before making critical changes.

* Why Option B is Correct:

* The Cloud CLI is the most direct way to create a snapshot, giving developers control over when and how snapshots are generated. Option A is incorrect as there is no button for snapshot creation in the Web Interface, and Option C is unnecessary as support is not required to create a snapshot.

NEW QUESTION # 13

Which command should be used to refresh the cache using the command line?

- A. magentocachedelete<type>
- B. magentocacherefresh<type>
- C. magentocache:clean<type>

Answer: C

Explanation:

To refresh the cache using the command line in Magento, the command `bin/magento cache:clean <type>` is used. This command clears the cache for the specified type, such as configuration, layout, or block HTML.

Cleaning the cache is an essential maintenance task that helps to update the store's frontend with the latest changes and ensure that customers see the most current content. This command is particularly useful during development or after making changes to the store's configuration or layout.

NEW QUESTION # 14

There is an integration developed using a cron service that runs twice a day, sending the Order ID to the integrated ERP system if there are orders that are able to create an invoice. The order is already loaded with the following code:

`$order = $this->orderRepository->get($orderId);`

In order to verify if the store has invoices to be created, what implementation would the Adobe Commerce developer use?

- A.
- B.
- C.

Answer: B

Explanation:

The correct implementation to check if an order is eligible for invoicing is to use the `$order->canInvoice()` method. This method checks whether the order meets all necessary conditions for an invoice to be created, such as the order not being fully invoiced or canceled.

Option A is correct for the following reasons:

* Using `canInvoice()` for Invoicing Eligibility: The `$order->canInvoice()` method is specifically designed to verify if an order can have an invoice generated. It returns true only if the order is in a state where it can be invoiced. This makes it the appropriate method for determining whether the order should be sent to the ERP system for invoicing.

* Explanation: The `canInvoice()` method is part of the `Magento\Sales\Model\Order` class and checks a variety of conditions to determine if invoicing is possible. This includes ensuring that the order is not fully invoiced or canceled, which are critical conditions in Adobe Commerce's order processing workflow.

NEW QUESTION # 15

Which is a correct CMS content element in Adobe Commerce?

- A. Sheet
- B. Widget
- C. Image

Answer: B

Explanation:

A widget is a CMS content element that can be used to display dynamic content on a page. Widgets can be used to display things like product reviews, social media feeds, or even custom content.

In Adobe Commerce, widgets are a correct CMS content element. Widgets allow merchants to add dynamic data or content blocks to CMS pages, static blocks, and various other locations throughout the store's layout without needing to directly edit the site's code. Options B (Sheet) and C (Image) are not recognized CMS content elements in the context of Adobe Commerce's terminology, making option A the correct answer.

NEW QUESTION # 16

For security reasons, merchant requested to a developer to change default admin url to a unique url for every branch/environment of their Adobe Commerce Cloud project.

Which CLI command would the developer use update the admin url?

- A. bin/magento admin:uri:set <admin_uri>
- B. magento-cloud variable:set ADMIN_URL
- C. ece-tools variable:update ADMIN_URL

Answer: B

Explanation:

The CLI command that the developer would use to update the admin url is magento-cloud variable:set ADMIN_URL. This command sets an environment variable called ADMIN_URL with a custom value for the admin url on a specific environment. Environment variables are configuration settings that affect the behavior of the Adobe Commerce Cloud application and services. By setting an environment variable for ADMIN_URL, the developer can change the default admin url to a unique url for every branch/environment of their Adobe Commerce Cloud project.
