Answer: D

NEW QUESTION # 64

Junos supports which two APIs for on-box scripting? (Choose two.)

- A. Chef
- B. JET
- C. Puppet
- D. XML

Answer: B,D

Explanation:

Juniper Networks' Junos operating system supports several APIs for on-box scripting, two of which are:

JET (Juniper Extension Toolkit): JET is a modern API framework that provides a programmable interface for interacting with Junos. It allows developers to create custom applications that run directly on Junos devices, enabling the automation of network operations. JET provides both a gRPC and a REST API interface, allowing for flexible integration with external systems.

XML API: The Junos XML API allows direct interaction with the Junos OS through XML-based requests. This API can be used to retrieve information, configure devices, and execute commands on Junos devices. The XML API is crucial for automation tasks as it provides a structured and consistent way to interact with the device's configuration and operational data.

Detailed Explanation:

JET (A) provides high-performance access to Junos routing, switching, and service elements via programmable interfaces. It is highly used for creating custom applications that require tight integration with the Junos OS.

XML (C), on the other hand, is a well-established method for interacting with Junos, especially for legacy systems or when working within environments where XML is the standard data format.

Other options like Puppet (B) and Chef (D) are not APIs provided by Junos for on-box scripting but are configuration management tools used externally to manage Junos devices.

Reference:

Juniper Networks JET Documentation: Provides details on how to leverage JET APIs for automation.

Junos XML Management Protocol Guide: Describes how to use XML for scripting and automating tasks in Junos.

These APIs are key components of Juniper's automation strategy, allowing for scalable, flexible, and efficient network operations.

NEW QUESTION # 65

You are asked to use the REST API to retrieve interface configuration information from your Junos device. You decide to use a cURL HTTP GET command to retrieve this information.

In this scenario, which statement is correct?

- A. The request is handled by the isrpd process running on the Junos device.
- B. The request is handled by the mod process running on the Junos device.
- C. The request is handled by the isd process running on the Junos device
- D. The request is handled by the rpd process running on the Junos device.

Answer: A

Explanation:

When using the REST API on a Junos device, the isrpd (Integrated Service Routing Process Daemon) process is responsible for handling REST API requests. This process listens for incoming HTTP requests and processes them accordingly, including retrieving interface configuration information when a GET request is made.

Option B is correct because the isrpd process handles the REST API requests on a Junos device.

Options A (mod process), C (rpd process), and D (isd process) are incorrect in this context as they either do not exist or serve different purposes on a Junos device.

Supporting Reference:

Juniper Networks REST API Documentation: Provides insights into how REST API requests are managed and processed by the isrpd process on Junos devices.

NEW QUESTION # 66

What is an example of correct XML syntax?

- A. <Device3><hostname>vMX1</hostname><Devices/>
- B. <Devices><hostname>vMX1</Devices></hostname>
- C. <Devices><hostname>vMX1</Devices>
- D. <Devices><hostname>vMX1</hostname></Device3>

Answer: B

NEW QUESTION # 67

Which two processes are used by Junos automation? (Choose two.)

- A. ifd
- B. mod
- C. jsd
- D. kmd

Answer: C,D

Explanation:

Junos automation relies on several key processes to handle various automation and API interactions. Let's break down the two key processes involved:

jsd (Junos Script Daemon):

The jsd process is responsible for handling automation scripts, including Python and SLAX scripts, as well as handling JET (Junos Extension Toolkit) API requests. This process is fundamental in the automation framework of Junos, as it deals with external and internal API requests, ensuring that the necessary scripts are executed when specific triggers or events occur.

kmd (Key Management Daemon):

The kmd process is involved in key management for IPsec and other security services. While its primary function is related to managing cryptographic keys, it plays a role in Junos automation by enabling secure communication and ensuring that automation tasks involving security services (such as automated IPsec tunnel creation) are handled securely.

Why the Other Options Are Incorrect:

A . mod: This process doesn't exist as part of the Junos automation framework. It's likely a distractor.

C . ifd: The ifd process is associated with the physical interfaces on the device and does not play a role in automation or script processing.
