NEW QUESTION # 32
What is an advantage of the read-only core file system using Adobe Commerce Cloud?

- A. Reduces the number of attackable surfaces significantly
- B. Improves website performance.
- C. Ensures that all changes to the production environment are tracked.

Answer: C

Explanation:
The read-only core file system on Adobe Commerce Cloud ensures that all changes to the production environment are tracked. This is because any changes to the code must go through version control, and the deployment pipeline, which includes stages like build, staging, and production. This approach helps maintain consistency across environments, ensures deployment best practices, and reduces human error by preventing direct changes on production servers.

NEW QUESTION # 33
Which action, if any, can be taken to change the URL key of the product?

- A. Use URL rewrite to map product id with the custom URL key.
- B. In the product admin form, under the Search Engine Optimization fieldset, the URL key can be set
- C. The product URL key is generated automatically, so it cannot be changed.

Answer: B

Explanation:
The URL key of a product is the text that is used to generate the product's URL. This text can be set by the merchant in the product admin form.
The URL key of a product in Adobe Commerce can be changed in the product admin form under the "Search Engine Optimization" fieldset. Here, the URL key can be set or edited manually, allowing for customization beyond the automatically generated value. This field is typically used to ensure that the product URL is search-engine friendly and relevant to the product.

NEW QUESTION # 34
How are multiple EAV attributes belonging to the same entity grouped in the database?

- A. Based on the sizes of values they contain
- B. Based on the types of values they contain
- C. Based on all numeric values being stored in one table while text values are stored in the other

Answer: B

Explanation:
Multiple EAV attributes belonging to the same entity are grouped in the database based on their data types, such as datetime, decimal, int, text, or varchar. For example, all attributes with datetime values are stored in one table, while all attributes with text values are stored in another table.
The sizes or numeric/text values of attributes do not determine how they are grouped in the database.
Verified References: [Adobe Commerce Developer Guide - EAV data model]
Magento's EAV (Entity-Attribute-Value) model organizes attributes based on their data types to optimize storage and retrieval. Attributes are grouped into different tables based on whether they store values of types such as integer, varchar (text), decimal, datetime, etc. This organization allows Magento to efficiently manage the diverse data types associated with products, customers, and other entities, ensuring data integrity and optimizing database performance by using appropriate indexing and storage mechanisms for each data type.

NEW QUESTION # 35
A product has been added to the Adobe Commerce Store, and it contains a value for the custom product attribute. A merchant reports that the attribute value is not displayed in the Additional Information tab on the product detail page.
Which action will correct this problem?

- A. The attribute property "Use in Product Tab' must be set to "yes"
- B. The attribute must be moved to the specific group in the attribute set
- C. The attribute property "Visible on Catalog Pages on Storefront" must be set to "yes".

Answer: C

Explanation:
The "Visible on Catalog Pages on Storefront" attribute property determines whether or not the attribute value is displayed in the Additional Information tab on the product detail page. If this property is set to "no", the attribute value will not be displayed.
For a custom product attribute to be displayed in the Additional Information tab on the product detail page in Magento, it needs to be visible on the catalog pages on the storefront. This visibility is controlled by the attribute property "Visible on Catalog Pages on Storefront". When this property is set to "yes", Magento includes the attribute in the Additional Information tab, making it visible to customers browsing the product.
This setting ensures that only relevant and intended attributes are shown on the storefront, allowing for better product information management and customer experience.
