NEW QUESTION # 131

The delivery team has been busy developing product features and have lost sight of how the individual features align with the overall strategy. They are unsure of progress against the initial product vision. What artifact can they assess to ensure they are aligned?

- A. Story map
- B. Product roadmap
- C. Portfolio Kanban
- D. Strategic plan

Answer: B

Explanation:

When a team loses track of how their daily work connects to the broader goals, the Product Roadmap is the most effective artifact to assess. The roadmap acts as a bridge between the Strategy Horizon and the Delivery Horizon, visualizing the high-level path toward the product vision over time. Unlike a detailed backlog, the roadmap focuses on themes, major features, and strategic milestones. By reviewing the roadmap, the team can see where their current features fit into the "Big Picture" and how they contribute to achieving organizational objectives. This realignment helps the team refocus on Value and Outcomes, ensuring that their technical efforts remain purposeful and that they are delivering increments that actually move the needle on the product's long-term success.

NEW QUESTION # 132

The team is frustrated that they have delivered solution increments that are not satisfying customer needs. They decide to use the following strategy to address this:

- A. Shorten the feedback cycle
- B. Write more detailed backlog items
- C. Write larger stories to deliver more during the iteration
- D. Decrease the team's velocity to focus on quality

Answer: A

Explanation:

When a team delivers increments that fail to satisfy customer needs, the most effective agile response is to shorten the feedback cycle. A shorter feedback cycle ensures that the team can elicit stakeholder reactions more frequently, allowing them to catch misalignments or misunderstandings early. In an agile context, the empirical nature of the work means that the team learns what works by showing tangible results to users. By increasing the frequency of these reviews or demos, the team can pivot their approach or refine the backlog based on actual user input rather than assumptions. This prevents the accumulation of waste (building the wrong thing) and ensures that subsequent iterations are more closely aligned with user expectations and business value.

NEW QUESTION # 133

Which of the following is true about the Strategy Horizon?

- A. The principles and agile mindset are the same as those at other horizons
- B. The principles are identical to the other horizons, but the agile mindset is different
- C. The principles are identical, but we use only a prescribed set of techniques
- D. The agile mindset is the same, but we operate under a specific set of Strategic Principles

Answer: A

NEW QUESTION # 134

A practice common to most agile approaches is to require that the items in the product backlog that are targeted to be delivered next, are:

- A. Strictly prioritized, and sequenced from smallest to largest work effort
- B. Strictly prioritized and forced ranked
- C. Unprioritized, but with known business value

- D. Loosely prioritized with some having the same priority

Answer: A
