Oracle Cloud Infrastructure 2025 Multicloud Architect Professional Sample Questions (Q30-Q35):

NEW QUESTION # 30

When using the Oracle Database at Azure, which tasks are carried out in the Azure portal?

- A. Provisioning container and pluggable databases
- B. Managing and maintaining Exadata VM cluster and infrastructure
- C. Configuring Oracle database homes
- D. Enabling Data Guard for database backups

Answer: B

Explanation:

Oracle Database@Azure is designed to bring Oracle Exadata infrastructure into Azure datacenters. This means that the Azure portal is used for managing the underlying Exadata infrastructure.

Here's a breakdown:

Managing and maintaining Exadata VM cluster and infrastructure: This includes tasks like:

Provisioning and managing the Exadata compute and storage servers

Managing virtual machines within the Exadata cluster

Monitoring the health and performance of the Exadata infrastructure

Applying infrastructure updates and patches

Why the other options are not primarily done in the Azure portal:

Configuring Oracle database homes: While the infrastructure is managed in Azure, the configuration of Oracle database software (like setting up Oracle homes) is typically handled through Oracle tools and utilities, similar to how it's done on-premises or in OCI.

Enabling Data Guard for database backups: Data Guard configuration and management are primarily done using Oracle database tools and commands, not directly within the Azure portal.

Provisioning container and pluggable databases: While the underlying infrastructure resides in Azure, the creation and management of Container Databases (CDBs) and Pluggable Databases (PDBs) are mostly handled using Oracle database tools and potentially through the OCI console for some specific tasks.

NEW QUESTION # 31

Which of the following tasks is the customer's responsibility when managing Oracle Database@Google Cloud?

- A. Applying operating system patches to the Exadata compute nodes.
- B. Maintaining the physical Exadata hardware within the Google Cloud data center.
- C. Creating and managing databases within the Exadata VM Cluster.
- D. Managing the network connectivity between the Google Cloud VPC and the Oracle FastConnect circuit.

Answer: C

Explanation:

Here's why:

Oracle Database@Google Cloud

is a managed service where Google handles the underlying infrastructure.¹ This means Google takes care of the physical hardware, operating system, and networking.

NEW QUESTION # 32

Which type of traffic is NOT supported by the cross-cloud connection between OCI and Microsoft Azure?

- A. Traffic from the Azure VNet to a peered OCI VCN in the same OCI region
- B. Traffic from the Azure VNet to a peered OCI VCN in a different OCI region
- C. Traffic between the Azure VNet and OCI VCN using private IP addresses
- D. Traffic between your on-premises network and the OCI VCN through the Azure VNet

Answer: D

Explanation:

The OCI-Azure Interconnect supports direct traffic between Azure VNets and OCI VCNs (Option D) and peered VCNs in the same (Option B) or different OCI regions (Option A) via private IPs. However, it does not support transitive routing, such as traffic from an on-premises network through Azure to OCI (Option C), as the interconnect is a direct cloud-to-cloud link. This limitation is detailed in Oracle's networking documentation for the OCI-Azure partnership.

NEW QUESTION # 33

What is used to monitor and analyze Oracle Exadata VM Cluster metrics in Azure?

- A. OCI Monitoring services
- B. Azure Monitoring services
- C. Microsoft Defender
- D. Oracle Database Management Tool

Answer: B

Explanation:

Azure Monitoring services are used to monitor and analyze Oracle Exadata VM Cluster metrics in the Oracle Database@Azure service, integrating seamlessly with Azure's ecosystem. Microsoft Defender (Option A) is a security tool, not for performance monitoring. OCI Monitoring (Option D) is separate, and no specific "Oracle Database Management Tool" (Option B) is highlighted for this purpose in Azure. Oracle's multicloud docs confirm Azure Monitoring's role.

NEW QUESTION # 34

How is Oracle Database@Google Cloud connected to the broader Oracle Cloud Infrastructure (OCI)?

- A. Through a public Internet connection with robust security measures
- B. Via a dedicated and redundant dark fiber network managed by Oracle
- C. By leveraging a shared virtual private network (VPN) connection
- D. Using Google Cloud's internal network infrastructure for seamless communication

Answer: B

Explanation:

Oracle Database@Google Cloud connects to OCI via a dedicated, redundant dark fiber network managed by Oracle, ensuring low-latency and high-reliability communication. VPN (Option A) and public internet (Option C) are less performant, and GCP's internal network (Option D) isn't the primary link-Oracle manages the interconnect. This is detailed in Oracle's multicloud architecture docs.
