dbt Labs dbt Analytics Engineering Certification Exam Sample Questions (Q109-Q114):

NEW QUESTION # 109

32. You are creating a `fct_tasks` model with this CTE:

```
with tasks as ( select * from {{ ref('stg_tasks') }}

You receive this compilation error in dbt:

Compilation Error in model `fct_tasks` (`models/marts/fct_tasks.sql`)

Model 'model.dbt_project.fct_tasks' (models/marts/fct_tasks.sql) depends on a node named 'stg_tasks' which was not found Which is correct? Choose 1 option.

Options:

- A. There is no stg_tasks in the data warehouse.
- B. A stg_tasks has not been defined in schema.yml.
- C. There is no dbt model called stg_tasks.
- D. stg_tasks is configured as ephemeral.

Answer: C

Explanation:

The dbt compilation error explicitly states that the model fct_tasks depends on a node named stg_tasks, but dbt cannot find any resource with that name in the project. dbt resolves ref('stg_tasks') at compile time by searching for a model, seed, or source named stg_tasks. When no such model exists, dbt raises the exact error shown: "depends on a node named 'stg_tasks' which was not found." This error occurs before execution and is unrelated to whether the table exists in the warehouse. For dbt, the existence of a warehouse table is irrelevant during compilation-only the presence of a declared dbt resource matters. Therefore, option C (no table in the warehouse) cannot cause this error.

Option A is incorrect because ephemeral models still count as dbt models, and dbt can resolve ref() to them without problem.

Option D is wrong because defining a model in schema.yml is optional and unrelated to dbt's ability to find the model. Tests and documentation require YAML entries, but model definitions do not.

Thus, the only correct explanation is that no model file named stg_tasks.sql exists under /models, making Option B the correct choice.

NEW QUESTION # 110

You're setting up a development environment in a cloud data warehouse with usage-based billing. How might you approach cost management in this context?

- A. Create a separate profiles.yml specifically for the development environment that utilizes smaller data warehouse resource classes.
- B. Set up usage alerts in your data warehouse that notify the team if costs exceed certain thresholds.
- C. Use dbt seeds to load smaller datasets for testing, reducing overall data processing costs.
- D. Implement automated scripts to shut down the development environment during non-working hours.

Answer: B

Explanation:

A). Controlling uptime reduces unnecessary costs. B. Right-sizing data warehouse resources helps align usage and cost C: Smaller datasets lower compute and storage costs. D: Proactive alerts prevent unexpected cost spikes.

NEW QUESTION # 111

You want to enhance the DAG visualization and highlight models that process sensitive data. How might you achieve this using macros?

- A. Use the meta configuration in your models to control specific visualization properties in the DAG-
- B. Develop a custom dbt package that extends the standard DAG rendering with sensitivity indicators-
- C. Embed additional icons or visual indicators directly within model descriptions using specialized macro logic-
- D. Write a macro that dynamically applies custom CSS classes to nodes in the DAG based on model tags or descriptions.

Answer: B,C,D

Explanation:

A: Custom CSS allows you to style the DAG flexibly based on model properties or tags. B: Macros can potentially be used to add small visual elements to descriptions. D: Packages can provide a more structured and potentially reusable way to achieve advanced DAG customization.

NEW QUESTION # 112

You're collaborating on a branch and need to temporarily switch to a different branch to address an urgent hotfix. Which Git command allows you to save your current uncommitted work without interrupting the changes on your active branch?

- A. git stash
- B. git reset
- C. git stage
- D. git push

Answer: A

Explanation:

git stash temporarily stores your uncommitted changes, enabling you to switch branches and later reapply those changes using git stash pop.

NEW QUESTION # 113

You have complex dbt models involving incremental logic based on a timestamp column. To debug a production issue, you want to temporarily force a full rebuild of a specific incremental model. Which dbt command-line options could help?

- A. Manually update the timestamp column in the incremental model's output table.
- B. Use dbt artifacts or the compilation context to access the current run's timestamp and override model logic.
- C. Add the -full-refresh flag to the dbt run command.
- D. Write a macro within the model to switch behavior based on an environment variable.

Answer: B,C

Explanation:

A overrides the incremental setting project-wide. C allows the model to be "tricked" into a full refresh. B is valid, but more work. D is risky and violates dbts workflow.
