- A. Establishes procedures for managing change to the new architecture
- B. Operates the process of managing architecture requirements
- C. Conducts implementation planning for the architecture defined in previous phases
- D. Provides architectural oversight for the implementation

Answer: D

The Implementation Governance phase involves the following activities:

Finalizing the Architecture Roadmap and the supporting Implementation and Migration Plan Assigning an Architecture Board to oversee the implementation Establishing Architecture Contracts with the implementation partners Reviewing and approving the implementation project plans and deliverables Performing Architecture Compliance reviews to ensure alignment with the architecture Performing Architecture Audit reviews to ensure quality and performance of the architecture Resolving any architecture issues or change requests that arise during the implementation Maintaining the architecture lifecycle and ensuring its continuity The Implementation Governance phase is essential for ensuring that the architecture is realized as intended and that it delivers the expected business value and outcomes.

NEW QUESTION # 151

Which of the following describes how the Enterprise Continuum is used when developing an enterprise architecture?

- A. To classify architecture and solution assets
- B. To describe how an architecture addresses stakeholder concerns
- C. To coordinate with the other management frameworks in use
- D. To identify and understand business requirements

Answer: A

Explanation:

The Enterprise Continuum consists of two complementary concepts: the Architecture Continuum and the Solutions Continuum¹. The Architecture Continuum provides a consistent way to describe and understand the generic and reusable architecture building blocks, such as models, patterns, and standards, that can be applied and tailored to specific situations². The Solutions Continuum provides a consistent way to describe and understand the specific and implemented solution building blocks, such as products, services, and components, that realize the architecture building blocks³. The Enterprise Continuum enables the reuse and integration of architecture and solution assets across different levels of abstraction, scope, and detail, ranging from foundation architectures to organization-specific architectures¹.

The Enterprise Continuum is used when developing an enterprise architecture to support the following activities¹:

*Selecting relevant architecture and solution assets from the Architecture Repository or other sources, based on the business drivers, goals, and requirements

*Adapting and customizing the architecture and solution assets to suit the specific needs and context of the enterprise

*Defining and developing the target architecture and the architecture roadmap, based on the gaps and opportunities identified between the baseline and the target states

*Defining and developing the implementation and migration plan, based on the architecture roadmap and the solution building blocks

*Governing and managing the architecture and solution assets throughout the architecture lifecycle, ensuring their quality, consistency, and compliance References: 1: The TOGAF Standard, Version 9.2 - Enterprise Continuum 2: The TOGAF Standard, Version 9.2 - Architecture Continuum 3: The TOGAF Standard, Version 9.2 - Solutions Continuum
