Which of the following backup methods protects all the changes that have occurred since the last full backup?

- A. Incremental
- B. Snapshot
- C. Archive
- D. Differential

Answer: D

Explanation:
A differential backup is a backup method that protects all the changes that have occurred since the last full backup. A differential backup copies all the files that have been added or modified since the last full backup, regardless of whether they have been backed up before or not. A differential backup does not reset the archive bit of the files, which means they will be backed up again in the next differential backup. A differential backup requires more storage space and time than an incremental backup, but it simplifies the restoration process, as only the last full backup and the last differential backup are needed to restore the data

NEW QUESTION # 168
Which of the following is the MOST secure method to access servers located in remote branch offices?

- A. Use a role-based access policy.
- B. Use a Telnet connection.
- C. Use an MFA out-of-band solution.
- D. Use a password complexity policy.

Answer: C

Explanation:
Explanation
This is the most secure method to access servers located in remote branch offices because MFA stands for multi-factor authentication, which requires users to provide more than one piece of evidence to prove their identity. An out-of-band solution means that one of the factors is delivered through a separate channel, such as a phone call, a text message, or an email. This adds an extra layer of security and prevents unauthorized access even if a password is compromised.
