IIBA Agile Analysis Certification Sample Questions (Q115-Q120):

NEW QUESTION # 115

During an early meeting, the team commits to a mindset of finding better ways to deliver the solution as well as sharing those ways with other teams. This reinforces the following nature of an agile mindset:

- A. System based and exploratory
- B. Comprehensive and complete
- C. Slow and steady
- D. Practice based and empirical

Answer: D

Explanation:

The Agile Mindset is fundamentally practice-based and empirical. This means that the team relies on direct experience, observation, and experimentation to find the most effective ways to deliver value. By committing to finding better ways and sharing those learnings, the team embraces the concept of continuous improvement. An empirical approach requires that teams "build-measure-learn," using real-world results to inform their next steps rather than strictly following a predetermined plan. Sharing these insights with other teams expands this learning to the organizational level, fostering a culture of agility across the enterprise. This focus on practical application and evidence-based decision-making ensures that the organization can adapt to complexity and uncertainty while constantly refining its ability to satisfy customer needs.

NEW QUESTION # 116

The delivery team is in a meeting identifying cycle time improvement opportunities for delivery of the final product. They decide to apply the following technique:

- A. Value stream mapping
- B. Story decomposition
- C. Backlog management
- D. Story mapping

Answer: A

Explanation:

Value stream mapping complete, fact-based, time-series representation of the stream of activities required to deliver a product or service.

NEW QUESTION # 117

Wanting to ensure the delivery team is working as productively as possible, they decide backlog items, including user stories, should be:

- A. Refined and elaborated by the Tech Lead
- B. Fully detailed as they enter the backlog
- C. Fully detailed before they get prioritized
- D. Refined and elaborated throughout the planning horizons

Answer: D

NEW QUESTION # 118

Working at the Strategy Horizon, the team realizes they need to stimulate collaboration and continuous improvement. They settle on the following to achieve this:

- A. Appoint a liaison to mediate between the customer and the teams

- B. Develop effective channels to allow the transfer of knowledge between teams
- C. Complete a benchmarking study of competitors
- D. Evaluate an initiative to continue or be cancelled

Answer: B

Explanation:

At the Strategy Horizon, stimulating collaboration and continuous improvement involves creating an ecosystem that supports learning across the enterprise. The team achieves this by developing effective channels to allow the transfer of knowledge between teams. In an agile organization, valuable insights gained by one delivery team (such as a technical breakthrough or a discovery about customer behavior) should be shared to benefit others. These channels might include "Communities of Practice," cross-team demos, or shared digital repositories. By facilitating this knowledge exchange, the organization avoids "siloes" learning and duplication of effort, directly supporting the principle of "Avoid Waste". This systemic collaboration ensures that the entire enterprise evolves together, increasing its overall capability to sense and respond to change effectively.

NEW QUESTION # 119

When the product owner determines there has been enough value delivered on the initiative to satisfy the need, then the sponsor's immediate next step is to:

- A. Hold individual interviews to collect feedback
- B. Dive deeper into the next delivery cycle's stories
- C. Cancel future work on the initiative to avoid waste
- D. Start work on the list of enhancements to improve the delivered product

Answer: B
