ISQI IREB Certified Professional for Requirements Engineering. Foundation Level Sample Questions (Q16-Q21):

NEW QUESTION # 16

The activity of seeking, capturing and consolidating requirements from various sources, which may involve reconstructing or creating requirements, is called:

- A. Requirements extraction
- B. Requirements elicitation
- C. Structured interview
- D. Requirements allocation

Answer: B

NEW QUESTION # 17

In a linear approach, the decision on a change proposal about a commissioned system is made by the:

- A. Development Team
- B. Change Control Board
- C. Change Advisory Board
- D. Product Owner

Answer: C

NEW QUESTION # 18

The scope of the system equals:

- A. The range of things that can be shaped or designed while developing a system
- B. Everything that is inside the system boundary.
- C. The boundary between the system and its surrounding context.
- D. The portion of the system environment relevant for understanding the system and its requirements.

Answer: A

Explanation:

Comprehensive and Detailed Explanation From Exact Extract:

IREB distinguishes system boundary, system context and scope of the system. The system boundary separates the system from its environment. The system context is the relevant part of the environment needed to understand the system and its requirements. The scope describes what can be influenced or shaped during development—the range of aspects we intend to design or modify. Some elements inside the scope may lie outside the final system boundary (e.g., organizational processes); likewise not everything inside the boundary must be in scope. Hence the correct definition is option B.

NEW QUESTION # 19

Choose the right sentence regarding requirements documents.

- A. All the other options are wrong
- B. A requirements document must also contain additional information and explanations.
- C. There is a universal structure that all requirements documents should follow.
- D. The product backlog is an explicit requirements document.

Answer: A

Explanation:

Comprehensive and Detailed Explanation From Exact Extract:

There is no single universal template for requirements documents; structures must be tailored to domain, process model and contractual needs, contradicting A.

In agile, a product backlog is a prioritized list of work items, not a traditional explicit requirements specification, though it does contain requirement-like entries, so B is inaccurate. While many specs include additional project and explanatory information, this is not mandatory, so C overstates. Consequently, the only generally correct answer is that the other statements are wrong.

NEW QUESTION # 20

Which of the following prototype types are not used in Requirements Engineering? (Select 2 answers.)

- A. Experimental prototype
- B. Mock-ups
- C. Exploratory prototype
- D. Technical feasibility prototype
- E. Evolutionary prototype

Answer: A,D

Explanation:

Comprehensive and Detailed Explanation From Exact Extract:

The handbook identifies three major prototype types in RE: exploratory prototypes (to establish shared understanding and validate requirements), evolutionary prototypes (early versions that grow into the final system) and mock-ups (medium-fidelity UI or interaction prototypes). These support elicitation and validation. Experimental prototypes, by contrast, are built mainly to evaluate technical solution concepts and feasibility; they belong more to design/architecture than RE. "Technical feasibility prototype" is not an official category and overlaps with experimental prototypes. Hence B and D are the ones not considered RE prototype types.
