NEW QUESTION # 61

During medication order entry, a pharmacy technician should consult a pharmacist:

- A. if the patient is allergic to the prescribed medication.
- B. if a patient has never taken the prescribed medication before.
- C. to obtain the patient's medication history.
- D. to clarify the date and time of the order.

Answer: A

Explanation:

Pharmacy technicians must notify the pharmacist immediately if a patient has an allergy to a prescribed medication. Dispensing an allergenic drug could cause severe reactions, including anaphylaxis.

* Check for allergies and drug interactions in the patient's profile.

* Alert the pharmacist if an allergy is detected.

* Ensure proper labeling for allergy warnings.

* (A) To obtain the patient's medication history#Incorrect - Technicians can review medication history, but pharmacists must intervene for allergies or significant concerns.

* (B) If the patient is allergic to the prescribed medication#Correct - An allergy could be life-threatening and requires pharmacist intervention.

* (C) To clarify the date and time of the order#Incorrect - Technicians can check the order date, but this is not a critical pharmacist intervention.

* (D) If a patient has never taken the prescribed medication before#Incorrect - While first-time medication use requires counseling, it does not always require pharmacist intervention unless there are drug interactions, high-risk medications, or allergies.
