Cisco Implementing and Operating Cisco Service Provider Network Core Technologies Sample Questions (Q121-Q126):

NEW QUESTION # 121

Refer to the exhibit:

□ This output is included at the end of an output that was provided by a device using NETCONF. What does the code show?

- A. It shows the hostname of the device as rpc-reply
- B. It shows NETCONF uses remote procedure calls.
- C. It shows that the running configuration is blank
- D. It shows that the full configuration is being modeled by VANG

Answer: B

NEW QUESTION # 122

□ Refer to the exhibit. Routers R1 through R5 are being deployed within the core of a service provider running BGP. The core supports distribution of VPNv4 routes using MPLS. R3 currently has multiple paths to reach R4. A network engineer must implement BGP attributes so that R3 can reach R4 via R1. Which action must the engineer take to meet the requirement?

- A. Configure R2 to send the route from R4 to R1 using a higher metric than what is advertised to R3.
- B. Configure R5 to send the route from R4 to R1 using a longer AS path than the AS path that it receives from R1 or R2.
- C. Configure R3 so the route to R4 through R1 will have a higher weight than the route from R2 or R5.
- D. Configure R3 so the route to R4 through R1 will have a lower local preference than the route from R2 or R5

Answer: C

Explanation:

To direct traffic from R3 to R4 via R1, the weight attribute on R3 can be set higher for the route through R1 compared to other routes. Weight is a Cisco-specific BGP attribute that determines the preferred path when multiple routes to the same destination exist. It is local to the router on which it is configured and not advertised to other BGP peers.
