The ACME company has CX 8320 switches at the Services-Aggregation layer and CX 6200 switches at the Wired Access Layer. WiFi WLANs are deployed in an L2 model. After implementing IPv6 for wireless clients alongside IPv4, connectivity problems have increased.

What is the most efficient step to resolve this problem?

- A. Replace the CX 8320 with CX 8360 switches
- B. Change the CX 8320 profile from L3-Agg to L3-Core
- C. Migrate to the GW supercluster with two service aggregation layers
- D. Replace the CX 8320 with CX 8325 switches

Answer: A

Explanation:

The CX 8320 has significantly smaller control-plane scale for route tables-especially IPv6-compared to newer CX platforms. When dual-stacking WLAN clients (adding IPv6 alongside IPv4), the number of routes /neighbor entries increases markedly. HPE Aruba platform guidance shows:

* CX 8320/CX 8325 class: ~131K IPv4 and ~32K IPv6 routes.

NEW QUESTION # 52

Match each Group Based Policy (GBP) role description to its respective role ID.

Answer:

Explanation:

Explanation:

default GBP role = GBP role ID = 0

infrastructure GBP role = GBP role ID = 2

user-defined GBP role = GBP role ID = <100-8191>

NEW QUESTION # 53

Your customer's employees connected to a wired network are complaining about a poor user experience. The customer has UXI sensors deployed on their premises. These sensors have been running for multiple months.

They are testing both the wired network (using the wired Interface of each sensor) and the wireless networks.

Your customer used the UXI dashboard to find the reason for the poor user experience to find more details, the customer asked you to check the packet captures that have been downloaded from the sensors using the UXI dashboard. From the zip file downloaded from the UXI sensors, you checked the "datagrams" .pcap file, but you were not able to find any issues. How can you explain this?

- A. The UXI sensor could not upload the latest test results to the cloud, so the packet capture is outdated
- B. The "datagrams- pcap file only contains me successful tests Failed tests are contained in the "datagrams-failed" .pcap file
- C. The default filters of the packet captures do not allow failed tests to be captured by the sensor
- D. The datagrams captured on the physical Ethernet interface are in a different .pcap file.

Answer: B

Explanation:

It is a common practice to separate successful and failed test results into different files for ease of troubleshooting. If the "datagrams.pcap" file shows no issues, it's likely because it only contains successful test data, and the failed tests that could explain the poor user experience would be in a different file, such as "datagrams-failed.pcap."

NEW QUESTION # 54

A BGP routing table contains multiple routes to the same destination prefix. Referring to the table below which route would be marked with a ">" symbol?

Route	Distance	Metric	Origin Code	Local Preference
A		200	i	0
B		0	?	100
C		20	?	0
D	200	0	i	100
E	20	0	i	100

- A. Option D
- B. Option C
- C. Option A
- D. Option B
- E. Option E

Answer: E

Explanation:

In BGP, the route marked with a ">" symbol is the best route that is chosen based on BGP attributes in the following order: highest weight (Cisco-specific), highest local preference, originated by BGP running on the local router, shortest AS path, lowest origin type, lowest MED, eBGP over iBGP, closest IGP neighbor, and lowest BGP router ID. Based on the table provided, Option E would be marked with a ">" symbol as it has the highest local preference of 100 which is a decisive factor in the BGP best path selection process.

NEW QUESTION # 55

What directly affects the MCS used by wireless stations? (Select two.)

- A. SNR
- B. Frequency band
- C. Retry rate
- D. Channel utilization
- E. Number of connected clients

Answer: A,C

Explanation:

Comprehensive and Detailed Explanation (Verified Extract from HPE Aruba Networking Wireless Documentation) The Modulation and Coding Scheme (MCS) determines the data rate that a wireless station uses to transmit or receive data frames. The MCS index selection depends primarily on the signal quality and error conditions observed on the wireless link.

Two factors have a direct and measurable influence:

1. Signal-to-Noise Ratio (SNR)

A higher SNR means better signal quality and less interference, allowing the station to use higher-order modulations (e.g., 64-QAM, 256-QAM, 1024-QAM) corresponding to higher MCS indexes.

When SNR decreases, the client dynamically reduces its MCS rate to maintain reliability.

"Stations dynamically select the highest MCS index that the current SNR can support to maintain an acceptable frame error rate."

2. Retry Rate

The retry rate reflects retransmissions due to poor frame reception. A high retry rate indicates a high error rate, prompting the station to step down to a lower MCS to improve link stability.

"If retransmissions increase, the MCS rate is reduced until the error rate stabilizes." Other Options Explanation:

* B. Channel utilization: affects airtime efficiency but not MCS selection directly.

* C. Number of connected clients: impacts contention and throughput, not MCS per station.

* E. Frequency band: influences propagation and SNR indirectly but does not directly control MCS selection.

Final Verified Answers: A and D
