Which field in a DNS Request event points to the responsible process?

- A. ContextProcessId_decimal
- B. ParentProcessId_decimal
- C. ContextProcessId_readable
- D. TargetProcessId_decimal

Answer: C

Explanation:

The ContextProcessId_readable field in a DNS Request event points to the responsible process. The ContextProcessId_readable field is the readable representation of the process identifier for the process that initiated the DNS request. It can be used to identify which process was communicating with a specific domain or IP address. The TargetProcessId_decimal, ContextProcessId_decimal, and ParentProcessId_decimal fields do not point to the responsible process.

NEW QUESTION # 16

In which of the following stages of the Cyber Kill Chain does the actor not interact with the victim endpoint(s)?

- A. Exploitation
- B. Weaponization
- C. Command & control
- D. Installation

Answer: B

Explanation:

Weaponization is the stage of the Cyber Kill Chain where the actor does not interact with the victim endpoint(s). Weaponization is where the actor prepares or packages the exploit or payload that will be used to compromise the target. This stage does not involve any communication or interaction with the victim endpoint(s), as it is done by the actor before delivering the weaponized content. Exploitation, Command & Control, and Installation are all stages where the actor interacts with the victim endpoint(s), either by executing code, establishing communication, or installing malware.
