NEW QUESTION # 161
Which is an aspect of systems thinking?

- A. Cadence makes routine everything that can be routine
- B. Optimizing a component does not optimize the system
- C. Mastery drives intrinsic motivation
- D. The length of the queue impacts the wait time

Answer: B

Explanation:
Systems thinking is a holistic approach to solution development, incorporating all aspects of a system and its environment into the design, development, deployment, and maintenance. It requires leaders and teams to understand the solution, the enterprise, and the value stream as a system. One of the principles of systems thinking is that optimizing a component of the system does not optimize the whole system. In fact, it may even harm the system performance, as it may create bottlenecks, conflicts, or waste in other parts of the system. Therefore, systems thinking encourages looking at the system as a whole and finding the best trade- offs and synergies among the components. NEW QUESTION # 162
Why is it important to decouple deployment from release?

- A. To allow early access to specific groups of customers
- B. To remove the need to respond quickly to production issues
- C. To enable releasing functionality on demand to meet business needs
- D. To make deploying of assets a business decision

Answer: C

Explanation:
= Decoupling deployment from release means having the ability to deploy changes to a system without having to make a new release of the system. This can be a valuable capability when making changes to a system that is in production and needs to be rolled back quickly if there are problems. It also allows releasing functionality on demand to meet business needs, which is one of the aspects of the Continuous Delivery Pipeline in SAFe. By decoupling deployment from release, enterprises can achieve faster feedback, higher frequency, and greater safety in delivering value to customers.
